UPWA Unfit, Murray Says In Attack On 3 Unions

CIO Conclave Hails Blast at Left Wing; Cites Moscow's Hope For Truman Defeat

Portland, Oreg., Nov. 22 (AP).—Philip Murray, for years the peacemaker of the CIO, publicly switched today into a lashing opponent of leftists and "unfit" unions within his own organization.

Before the opening session of the National CIO convention, he demanded the reorganization of three unions which he said had failed in the CIO's mission "to organize the unorganized."

The CIO president's denouncement was unprecedented. It surprised even the executive board members on the platform with him. It stunned delegates. But it was popular.

They came to their feet cheering when he singled out the United Office and Professional Workers and the United Public Workers of America as unions that are "obviously not sufficient." Both have been in the left wing of the CIO.

Later the delegates, almost as a man, voted in support of Murray's annual report, which had been under fire of several of the unions denounced earlier in the day by Murray.

No one voted in opposition, and only one delegation—the Office and Professional Workers Union—recorded itself as abstaining.

Donald Henderson, president of the Food and Tobacco Workers Union, led the attack against the foreign policy section in Murray's annual report. Particularly under fire was the Marshall Plan, but this opposition was completely snowed under when the vote came.

Leftists alone did not bear the brunt of Murray's attack.

He also included the Retail and Wholesale Workers as an "inadequate" union. This one generally has been in the right wing, although some locals, particularly in the New York area, have broken away.

He urged delegates to place the matter in the hands of the CIO executive board for "review and contemplated action."

Then Murray demanded the resignation of Communists who have failed as labor leaders.

He asserted, however, "It is not a question of communism with me. If a Communist is leading a labor organization in the CIO and, after years of existence, he is unable to demonstrate his fitness to organize the unorganized, then in justice to the people employed in that industry he should resign."

Murray drew frequent applause, but it was his reference to the Communists that brought the delegates to their feet.

He called the election of President Truman a defeat for the Communists.

"It is definitely a well-established fact that the Communist Party about two years ago determined through the exercise of its might and power through Moscow to drive President Truman out of the White House. They did not care whether Dewey was elected or the devil was elected," Murray said.

"Togther with others, we won that election and saved America," he said.

He added the CIO did not claim complete credit for the outcome, but reminded delegates, "The CIO as a labor organization was about the only union in the United States that stuck its neck out in this fight."

Later he said, "No political organization anywhere in the United States contributed more towards the election of the President and a liberal Congress and liberal governors than did the CIO-PAC."

Abram Flaxer, president of the United Public Workers, told reporters he would make a convention speech replying to Murray's attack. His union claims 35,000 Federal workers, of whom about 15,000 are in the Panama Canal Zone.

James Durkin, president of the Office and Professional Workers, could not be located for comment. Durkin is also president of the New York City CIO Council.

Crusade in Europe

Falaise Field of Carnage Like Dante Scene to Eisenhower

By Dwight D. Eisenhower

XVII

As the enemy saw the American First Army attack gather momentum to the southward and finally break through the Avranches bottleneck, his reaction was swift and characteristic. Chained to his general position by Hitler's orders as well as by the paralyzing action of our air forces, he immediately moved westward all available armor and reserves from the Caen area to counterattack against the narrow strip through which American forces were pouring deep into his rear. His attack, if successful, would cut in behind our breakout troops and place them in a serious position.

Bradley and I, aware that the German counterattack was under preparation, carefully surveyed the situation. We had sufficient strength in the immediate area so that if we chose merely to stand on the defensive against the German attack he could not possibly gain an inch. However, to make absolutely certain of our defenses at Mortain, we would have to diminish the number of divisions we could hurl into the enemy's rear and so sacrifice our opportunity to achieve the complete destruction for which we hoped.

Moreover, by this time the weather had taken a very definite turn for the better and we had in our possession an Air Transport Service that could deliver, if called upon, up to 2000 tons of supplies per day in fields designated by any of our forces that might be temporarily cut off.

When I assured Bradley that even under a temporary German success he would have this kind of supply support, he unhesitatingly determined to retain only minimum forces at Mortain, and to rush the others on south and east to begin an envelopment of the German spearheads. I was in his headquarters when he called Montgomery on the telephone to explain his plan, and although the latter expressed a degree of concern about the Mortain position, he agreed that the prospective prize was great and left the entire responsibility for the matter in Bradley's hands.

Delicate Decision Typical in Field

Bradley's judgment as to his ability to hold the Mortain hinge was amply demonstrated by events but the whole situation is yet another example of the type of delicate decision that a field commander is frequently called upon to make in war. Had the German tanks and infantry succeeded in breaking through at Mortain, the predicament of all troops beyond that point would have been serious, in spite of our ability partially to supply them by airplane.

The enveloping movement from the south had as its first objective the destruction or capture of the German forces in the Mortain-Falaise region, while at the same time there remained the opportunity for sweeping up remaining portions of the German First and Seventh Armies by directing an even wider employment toward the crossings of the Seine River.

The Germans were still fighting desperately just south of Caen, where by this time they had established the strongest defenses encountered throughout the entire campaign. The Canadians threw in fierce and sustained attacks but it was not until August 16 that Falaise was finally captured, Caen, by then a heap of rubble, had been captured on July 9.

With the great bulk of all the Allied forces attacking from the perimeter of a great half-circle toward a common center, the determination of the exact points on which each element should halt, in order not to become involved against friendly units coming from the opposite direction, was a tricky problem."

South France Invasion Opposed by Churchill

After the invasion of Normandy, Winston Churchill opposed the invasion of southern France.

Field Marshal Montgomery wanted to retain tactical control of all ground forces during the European command.

In August, 1944, General Eisenhower gave his views of what should be done with beaten Germany.

Calamitous Battle Averted by Order

"I was in Bradley's headquarters when messages began to arrive from commanders of the advancing American columns, complaining that the limits placed upon them by their orders were allowing Germans to escape. I completely supported Bradley in his decision that it was necessary to obey the orders, prescribing the boundary between the army groups, exactly as written; otherwise a calamitous battle between friends could have resulted.

In the face of complete disaster the enemy fought desparately to hold open the mouth of the closing

Ruhr Plan Held 'Void' By France

Further Discussion Asked on Decision To Place Area Under Germany

By Walter Kerr

Paris, Nov. 22 (NYHT).—France has told the United States and Britain that she considered null and void their joint decision to hand over the Ruhr to a future German government, it was revealed today.

A document to this effect was given to Secretary of State George C. Marshall Saturday, just prior to his departure for Washington, and to Hector McNeil, British Minister of State.

The note requested top-level discussions together with further study of German reparations and French plans for international management of the Ruhr's steel plants and coal and iron mines.

The memorandum summarized views expressed to Marshall and McNeil by Robert Schuman, French Foreign Minister, in Paris last Friday.

Its text disclosed the French had objected to the decision as early as last August, when General Pierre Koenig, French military governor, first heard the plans of Generals Sir Brian Robertson and Lucius D. Clay, the British and American military governors.

The new protest was based on the fact that Robertson and Clay were not competent to take decisions which should be settled only in a German peace treaty.

The Americans and British were told a centralized German state which owned the Ruhr would be potentially more powerful than Hitler's reich, which did not own the Ruhr.

President Walks to Work

ONCE AGAIN—President Truman walked along Pennsylvania ave. yesterday in front of the White House on his way from his temporary home in Blair House, across the street, to his office in the west wing of the Executive Mansion. And he probably will continue to do so while the White House is undergoing repairs. He did the same thing in the days immediately following the death of President Roosevelt, when the Trumans also lived at Blair House. A full page of pictures of the President's new home, page C-3. Dock Union Turns Down Back-to-Job Proposal

New York Dealt Another Blow As Teamsters Quit In Pay Dispute

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Union negotiators rejected tonight an employer-sponsored back-to-work proposal that would end the East Coast's dock strike.

A union spokesman said the offer was no better than one previously rejected.

The union and employer groups had met in joint session to discuss a plan whereby the AFL dock workers would return to work immediately and then both sides would work out details of a welfare plan.

"We told the employers that their offer on a welfare fund was no more than what they had offered in the proposal that the union has already rejected," Joseph P. Ryan, president of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association (ILA) said.

"We told them they've got to give us something different," he added.

John V. Lyon, chairman of the employer group, later told newsmen his bargaining committee will meet again Tuesday to discuss today's session.

He said that whether another proposal will be made to the union depends on the next employer meeting. The union negotiators also will meet again Tuesday.

Hit Another Blow

Meanwhile the city's strike-battered commercial life was hit another blow today as AFL teamsters walked out in a pay dispute.

Some 2600 helpers and drivers, by union estimates, quit work at 337 trucking firms to enforce demands for a 22½-cent-an-hour wage hike. Police headquarters said its figures showed only 694 truck drivers out at seven firms.

Joseph Adelizzi, chairman of a truck employers' group, said the strike had tied up a third of the city's general trucking industry.

"This strike could be a long drawn-out affair," he said. "Our people are pretty determined. We have a consolidated group."

Adelizzi is chairman of the wage scale committee of the Motor Carrier Association.

The maritime strike, which has tied up ports from Maine to Virginia, and kept the queens of the British and American merchant fleets at their docks, is now in its thirteenth day. Thousands of workers in other industries have been laid off.

Rejected 10-Cent Boost

Some 65,000 members of the ILA turned down a contract providing a boost of 10 cents hourly in the basic rate of pay of $1.75 before the strike began.

The strikers have cut in half their demands for an increase of 50 cents an hour for straight time and a 75-cent hourly hike for night and weekend overtime work. The union, however, wants to make any increase retroactive to August 21 instead of September 23, the date set in the rejected contract. Improvements in vacations and hiring methods also were demanded.

Meanwhile, the striking crewmen of the Queen Elizabeth went back to work in Southampton today after the Cunard White Star Line promised the liner will not sail until the United States dock strike is settled.

The Queen was to have been

Sen. Maybank To Lead Fight For Key Bills

Silent in Campaign, He Throws Support To Truman Program

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A Southern Democrat, who remained silent on President Truman's candidacy throughout the campaign, yesterday promised to lead the Senate fight for public housing, slum clearance, rent control and other key Truman economic measures.

Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.), whose State went for Governor Thurmond, States' Rights candidate, while the Senator kept mum, is in line to succeed ailing Senator Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.) as Senate Banking Committee Chairman if Wagner steps down.

Maybank told newsmen yesterday he prefers to have Wagner retain the post during his illness, but he promised, in any event, to lead the fight for the important Administration measures now before the committee.

Maybank said he kept silent on the presidency during the campaign "because I had a hard re-election fight on my hands."

He said he wired the President after his election promising to cooperate on as much of his program as he could. He implied that his pledge went for nearly everything in the program except civil rights.

The Senate's Administration leadership not only plans no penalties in Maybank's case, but reportedly is urging him to take over the leadership of the committee during Wagner's illness. The New Yorker's consent to the arrangement will be asked at informal conferences within the next fortnight.

At the same time, the Administration is reported anxious to dissuade Wagner from resigning from the Senate, even though he may be absent a good part of the time. If Wagner resigns, Gov. Thomas E.

Timely Tips

Helpful Post Bakes Your Holiday Bird

By Lucia Brown
Post Reporter

Have you ever been terrified by a turkey?

If not, you've happily escaped the fate of a large portion of humanity, judging by calls which crowd the switchboard of The Washington Post each Thanksgiving Eve.

"Give me the food editor, quick!" "I've got the turkey's feathers off; now what do I do?" "How do you pull a tendon?" "Shall I roast it breast up or breast down? Covered or uncovered?"

To insure aid and comfort for novice turkey cooks among our readers, we offer today a few suggestions on buying and baking the Thanksgiving bird. Incidentally, if he's not already crowding your refrigerator or gobbling in your backyard, bargain for him without delay to avoid last-minute disappointments. (Or, if those prices prove too frightening, line up chicken, duck or turkey "cut-ups"—the halves, quarters or individual pieces.)

If you want a smallish turkey—8 to 15 pounds—get a hen. If you need a 16-to 25-pound bird, you can buy at lower prices per pound. Remember that if you buy a pound per person (New York dressed), you'll have enough for two helpings apiece at the first meal, choice tidbits for a second.

"New York dressed" means that only the feathers have been removed, but your butcher will usually draw the bird for you, clean the giblets and cut off the neck close to the body. Ask him to remove the leg tendons before he cuts off the legs. They get dry and hard during roasting, make a drumstick fit for nothing but drumbeating.

When you're ready to roast your prize, snip out any extra pinfeathers with tweezers. Wash and drain the turkey and rub the neck and

King George Ailing, Tour Is Postponed

London (Tuesday) Nov. 23 (AP).—King George VI postponed today, because of ailing health, the royal tour of Australia and New Zealand which had been scheduled for next year.

An announcement from Buckingham Palace shortly after midnight said complete rest had been advised for the 52-year-old British ruler and therefore all his public engagements have been canceled for some months.

The announcement said the King is suffering from an obstruction to the circulation in his right leg, a blood clot.

Palace sources said neither the doctors nor members of the royal family are worried about the sovereign's health generally, although the palace announcement said "a defective blood supply to the right foot causes anxiety."

It was stated specifically the King "is suffering from an obstruction to the circulation through the arteries of his legs which only recently has become acute."

It was learned the King first complained about a loss of feeling in his right foot about two weeks ago. Five doctors have been attending him for the past week.

His doctors said: "The King's general health, including the condition of his heart, gives no reason for concern, but no doubt the strain of 12 years has appreciably affected his resistance to physical fatigue. It would be hazardous to embark upon a long journey, which might delay recovery and involve serious risk to a limb."

5 New Polio Cases Boost Total in Area to 261

Five new polio cases, including those of two brothers in Brandywine, Md., were reported in the Washington area yesterday. The new cases boosted the area polio total to 261, empared with 56 for this date last year.

The Brandywine brothers, 5 and 11 years old, were reported to have been stricken at the same time.

The other three cases were an 11-month-old boy from the 3900 block of Pennsylvania ave. se., a 4-year-old girl from the 4800 block of Berwyn rd., Berwyn, Md., and a 4-year-old girl from the 100 block of W. George Mason dr., Falls Church, Va.

The reports raised the District total this year to 132 and the figure for nearby Maryland and Virginia to 129.

Overdue Vessel Avoids Salvage

Orange, Tex., Nov. 22 (AP).—The small Nicaraguan motor vessel Explorer, overdue for a week with a million-dollar cargo, limped into Sabine Pass, 25 miles south of Orange, Tex., today.

Laden with 93 tons of concentrated gold and silver ore, the Explorer, object of a weekend search, was found Saturday by the shrimp boat Mary B, 10 miles off Cameron, La., and given enough fuel to reach Orange.

If she had been completely out of fuel, the ship and cargo would have been subject to salvage under maritime law. J. P. Kerr, Orange port director said, "If the Explorer was out of fuel and the shrimp boat skipper neglected to throw a tow line aboard, he obviously missed out on a fortune."

Paoting Falls As Communists Renew Drive

Offensive Appears Designed to Cut Off All North China

Nanking, China, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Chinese Communist troops today captured Paoting, capital of Hopeh Province, and were reported driving toward Peiping in what appeared to be a new offensive to cut off all North China.

Coinciding with the fall of Paoting, 90 miles southwest of Peiping and 90 miles west of Tientsin, Gen. Fu Tso-yi, supreme Nationalist commander in the north, clamped a strict 24-hour curfew and censorship on five provinces under his command.

Paoting's capture was admitted by military sources in Peiping.

Communist Drive Reported

Peiping sources told of a Red push by victorious Manchurian Communists under Gen. Lin Piao, who has reportedly moved more than 100,000 troops into North China since the capture of Mukden November 2.

Part of General Lin's forces was said to be 30 miles east of Peiping, another large Communist force was reported operating between Paoting and Peiping.

General Fu's order placed Hopeh, Chahar, Suiyuan, Jehol and Shansi provinces under complete military control.

On the east-central front, the government's claimed "counter-offensive" admittedly was set back by the Communists near Suchow, 200 miles northwest of Nanking.

Red Claims Supported

A Nationalist communique said Gen. Huang Po-tao's Nationalists were "now fighting westward" from Nienchuang, 33 miles east of Suchow, indicating the Communists have trapped Huang's forces, as they had claimed yesterday.

It appeared the heralded government counter-offensive east of Suchow amounted to this: The Communists retired a few miles northward, permitting Huang's troops to

Truman Sees Marshall on U. S. Relations

Conference Covers Developments in Both Europe and Asia

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman and Secretary of State Marshall had a conference yesterday which covered the whole field of America's foreign relations in Asia as well as in Europe.

However, the question of how long Secretary Marshall is to remain in the Truman Cabinet remained unanswered.

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross, when asked about this, told reporters:

"The President had nothing to add to what he said in Key West."

Met at Airport

Mr. Truman, at a news conference in the Florida city last week, said that Marshall had always wanted to go into retirement since he finished his duties as Chief of Staff of the Army, but had stayed on in the Government in a civilian capacity as a patriotic duty.

Secretary Marshall and Mrs. Marshall were met at the airport by President Truman when they arrived yesterday from Paris.

"It's sure good to see you," Mr. Truman told the couple.

It was raining at the time, and the No. 1 man of the Cabinet was much moved by the fact that the President had turned out to greet him.

Talks With Harriman

"I really appreciate tremendously the President's coming out to see me, particularly on a day like this," he told reporters.

Mr. Truman drove Secretary Marshall and Undersecretary Robert Lovett to the State Department in his own car. Then he proceeded to the White House for conferences with W. Averell Harriman and other officials.

Harriman, Ambassador to the Marshall Plan countries in Europe, said he told Mr. Truman of the "wave of enthusiasm" that had rolled across the Continent at a

Soviet Splitting City

Berlin Situation Declared Beyond Solving by Directive

By Stephen White

Berlin, Nov. 22 (NYHT).—The Berlin situation has worsened so substantially in the past few weeks that the hard-won Moscow directives no longer would resolve the crisis, an authoritative official of the American military government said today.

He referred to Russian efforts to split Berlin into two cities.

His statement indicated that present United Nations attempts to resolve the Berlin situation are doomed to failure and that the Berlin crisis is here to stay. The official is completely dependable and has close contact with policy both here and at the U. N.

The Moscow directives were issued late in August after conferences among the Western allies and Premier Josef V. Stalin. Follow-up talks in Berlin broke down because of continued Russian refusal to compromise.

Since then, Russian actions in Berlin have so altered the position, according to this official, that even if the Russians were willing to take up where they broke off last September there could be no hope of reaching agreement. Currency problems under discussion in Paris now have only secondary bearing on the real issue, he declared.

He pointed out the Russians have steadily accelerated measures to break the city of Berlin in two. They already have set up a separate police and fire administration and have split the economics and transport divisions.

On December 5 western Berlin will elect a new city government which the Russians almost certainly will refuse to accept. Accordingly there will be two cities of Berlin.

The splitting of the city is irreversible, this official maintains, and therefore once the city is split the crisis becomes a continuing state of affairs.

The only hope, he concluded, is that the economic recovery of western Europe and Germany will make the problems in Germany ones the Germans can solve themselves or that a general European settlement would include Berlin.

Wrights' Pioneer Plane Comes Here After 20-Yr. London Stay

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

The Kitty Hawk—now recognized as the world's first man-carrying flying machine—came "home" yesterday after its 20-year stay in London's Kensington Museum.

The Wright brothers' original plane, packed in three crates, received a civic and military reception yesterday on the grounds of the Smithsonian Institution and was carried into the Institution's Arts and Industries Building.

As it entered the museum which will be its permanent hangar, the Kitty Hawk had to pass under the Langley aerodome, whose long recognition as the first plane capable of flight caused the bitter dispute which sent the Wright brothers' machine to England.

A group of oldtime aviators joined Government and military officials in a brief ceremony held on the Mall in front of the Freer Gallery of Art to celebrate the homecoming.

The show was almost stolen by a modern helicopter, sent by the Coast Guard from Kitty Hawk, N. C., for the occasion, which maneuvered and landed several times in a roped-off area on the Mall between Adams and Washington drives.

The crates containing the famed aircraft which flew on December 17, 1903, on the sands of Kitty Hawk, arrived in the early after-

Court Denies His Plea

Oklahoma U. Negro Student Loses Nonsegregation Fight

Oklahoma City, Nov. 22 (AP).—A three-judge Federal Court today denied a Negro's plea to attend classes at the University of Oklahoma on a nonsegregated basis.

The Negro is G. W. McLaurin, who began graduate work in the university last month—the first of his race ever to attend the State university at Norman.

The court ruled the retired professor is receiving equal educational opportunities with those of white students and added it is "within the power of the State to recognize racial distinctions between its citizens and to classify them."

McLaurin—seeking a doctor's degree in education—was ordered admitted to the university last September by this same court. The three judges held Oklahoma's segregation laws unconstitutional and void in McLaurin's case. The university's regents then ordered McLaurin admitted on a segregated basis.

There was no comment immediately from McLaurin or his attorneys.

Oklahoma statutes forbid Negro and white students to attend the same schools.

McLaurin has been attending classes, sitting in an adjoining room which permits him to see and hear the professors.

The court's answer to the 54-year-old Negro's plea was an interpretation of its decision last September which allowed McLaurin to enter the university's graduate school.

Firing Charges Hearing Denied War Service Folk

War service appointees are exempted from protective provisions of Civil Service rules giving employes an opportunity to answer charges prior to dismissal, the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

The court dismissed the appeal of S. L. Levy, 1416 Euclid st. nw., who was a labor economist for the War Production Board in 1943-1944. Levy contended that he was wrongfully discharged and demanded reinstatement and back pay.

The court also ruled that if the regularly prescribed procedure is used in such cases and no legal right is denied, action of "executive officers in discharging employes is not subject to revision in the courts."

PEOPLE In The NEWS

By Sam Stavisky

Mao Tse-tung, China's No. 1 Communist, Poet, Pamphleteer, and Shrewd Politician

Mao Tse-tung, China's No. 1 Communist, is a long-haired poet, a Spartan philosopher, and something of a master politician to boot.

There's been much debate about Red China's shrewd, stoop-shouldered chief commissar: Is he a Tito or a titmouse? Does he stand up to Stalin, or does he kow-tow to the Kremlin?

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs, in a recent study of communism, stated that the "Chinese Communists have followed faithfully every zig-zag of the Kremlin line for a generation."

Obedient to Moscow

Tacitly, the State Department holds a similar view—that Mao Tse-tung (pronounced approximately "mou tse dung") and the Red China leadership obey orders from Moscow like the puppet premieres of eastern Europe's satellite states.

Earlier this month Mao announced that the Reds now control one fourth of China's land area, and about 35 per cent of her population, or 168 million people. (The population of the United States of America is around 150 million.) There's no way to calculate what proportion of Mao's statistics are fact, and what propaganda. But it is true that Red China includes a considerable chunk of the vast territory claimed by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist government.

Long-haired Mao Tough

Long, black hair, searching eyes, high cheekbones give Mao Tse-tung a somewhat effeminate appearance, but actually the 55-year-old Red leader is physically tough. Son of a peasant, Mao was reared in the hardy life of the soil.

An earnest student, Mao was caught up in the swirl of Sun Yat-sen's revolt against the Manchu dynasty in 1911—he was then 18. He joined a group of serious-minded intellectuals, and by 1917 they had formed a study society which already was absorbing Karl Marx. In 1920, Mao attended the meeting in Shanghai at which the Chinese Communist Party was formed.

The Communists participated in the Nationalist government until abruptly kicked out by Chiang Kai-shek, when he seized control in 1927. Mao escaped to his native Hunan, raised a "peoples army" and set up a Chinese Soviet.

At Yenan, capital of Red China—450 air miles southwest of Peiping—Mao lives a simple life. So do all the inhabitants of the bare, treeless city.

Mao's home is a four-room cave. It has few furnishings. Mao apparently has no personal possessions, wears the same homespun, baggy uniforms as the Red soldiers.

His wife, a onetime stage beauty some 20 years younger than her husband, also lives and dresses simply. Mao's first wife was executed by a warlord. His second wife accompanied him on the "long march," and later was sent on to Moscow. Mao divorced the second to marry beauteous Kiang Ching, which means "clear river."

march east to Nienchuang, then returned to the Suchow-Nienchuang line to bottle up the Nationalists.

The new Communist gains were announced a few hours after Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the Nationalist leader, broadcast an appeal to the United States for quick aid. She charged that Mao Tse-tung, No. 1 Chinese Communist, admits that the United States is his principal enemy.

The Nationalist communique claimed the Nationalists recaptured Nienchuang last night—first official admission the town had fallen to the Reds.

7 Priests Slain in Manchuria

By the United Press

A Catholic mission in western Manchuria reported to the National Catholic Welfare Conference yesterday that seven priests were killed in 1946 and 1947 during the Communist occupation and four others are missing or in jail.

The report was made by headquarters of the Catholic mission of Chihfeng, now located in Peiping. It told of priests who were dragged over rough ground by ropes until dead, forced to sit over burning wood or subjected to other tortures.

The report disclosed these casualties:

The Rev. Paul Shih, 51, of Chihfeng, pastor of Kulitu. He and the sisters of his orphanage were thrown in jail and subjected to severe punishment. He died in September, 1947, after being dragged by a rope over rough ground.

Rev. Paul Hsin, 33, director of the Hufeng school of Chihfeng. Accused of being a government agent, he was jailed for several months, questioned and tormented. He was shot in October, 1946, by a roadside and his body left for vultures.

Rev. Joseph Chang, 46, assistant pastor at Nalapiliu at the prison in Wutan. He was forced to sit over burning wood until his skin became black. Finally, he was dragged by a rope tied around his ankles. He died August 31, 1947.

Eisenhower Tells Of Field of Dead

pocket so as to save as much as he could from the debacle. German commanders concentrated particularly on saving armoured elements, and while a disappointing portion of their Panzer divisions did get back across the Seine, they did so at the cost of a great proportion of their equipment. Eight infantry divisions and two Panzer divisions were captured almost in their entirety.

The battlefield at Falaise was unquestionably one of the greatest "killing grounds" of any of the war areas. Roads, highways, and fields were so choked with destroyed equipment and with dead men and animals that passage through the area was extremely difficult.

Forty-eight hours after the closing of the gap I was conducted through it on foot, to encounter scenes that could be described only by Dante. It was literally possible to walk for hundreds of yards at a time, stepping on nothing but dead and decaying flesh.

In the wider sweep directed against the crossing of the Seine behind the German Army, the rapidly advancing Americans were also forced to halt to avoid overrunning their objectives and firing into friendly troops. The German again seized the opportunity to escape with a greater portion of his strength than would have been the case if the exact situation could have been completely foreseen.

While the bulk of Bradley's forces was engaged in these great battles and overrunning France toward Paris, General Middleton's VIII Corps turned back to the westward to overrun the Brittany Peninsula and to capture the ports in that area. We were still of the belief that some use would have to be made of Quiberon Bay and possibly of Brest. Middleton was directed to capture these places as quickly as possible.

Brest fell on September 19. The harbor and its facilities had been so completely wrecked by our bombing and by German demolitions that we never made any attempt to use it.

When the Allied armies finally completed their envelopment of the German forces west of the Seine the eventual defeat of the German in western Europe was a certainty. The question of time alone remained.

Our new situation brought up one of the longest-sustained arguments that I had with Prime Minister Churchill throughout the period of the war. This argument, beginning almost coincidentally with the breakthrough in late July, lasted throughout the first 10 days of August. One session lasted several hours. The discussions involved the wisdom of going ahead with Anvil, by then renamed Dragoon, the code name for the operation that was to bring in General Devers' forces through the south of France.

One of the early reasons for planning this attack was to achieve an additional port of entry through which the reinforcing divisions already prepared in America could pour rapidly into the European invasion. The Prime Minister held that we were now assured of early use of the Brittany ports and that the troops then in the Mediterranean could be brought in via Brittany or even might better be used in the prosecution of the Italian campaign with the eventual purpose of invading the Balkans via the head of the Adriatic.

To any such change I was opposed, and since the United States Chiefs of Staff, following their usual practice, declined to interfere with the conclusions of the commander in the field, I instantly became the individual against whom the Prime Minister directed all his argument.

Although I never heard him say so, I felt that the Prime Minister's real concern was possibly of a political rather than a military nature. He may have thought that a postwar situation which would see the Western Allies posted in great strength in the Balkans would be far more effective in producing a stable posthostilities world than if the Russian armies should be the ones to occupy that region. I told him that if this were his reason for advocating the campaign into the Balkans he should go instantly to the President and lay the facts, as well as his own conclusions, on the table. But I did insist that as long as he argued the matter on military grounds alone I could not concede validity to his arguments.

As usual, the Prime Minister pursued the argument up to the very moment of execution. As usual, also, the second that he saw he could not gain his own way, he threw everything he had into support of the operation. He flew to the Mediterranean to witness the attack and I heard that he was actually on a destroyer to observe the supporting bombardment when the attack went in.

In this long and serious argument the Prime Minister was supported by certain members of his staff. On the other hand, British officers assigned to my own headquarters stood firmly by me throughout.

Although in the planning days of early 1944 Montgomery had advocated the complete abandonment of the southern operation in order to secure more landing craft for Overlord, he now, in early August, agreed with me that the attack should go in as planned.

Coincidentally with this drawn-out discussion, Montgomery suddenly proposed to me that he should retain tactical coordinating control of all ground forces throughout the campaign. This, I told him, was impossible, particularly in view of the fact that he wanted to retain at the same time direct command of his own army group. To my mind and to that of my staff the proposition was fantastic.

The reason for having an army group commander is to assure direct, day-by-day battlefield direction in a specific portion of the front, to a degree impossible to a supreme commander. It is certain that no one man could perform this function with respect to his own portion of the line and at the same time exercise logical and intelligent supervision over any other portion.

The only effort of such a scheme would have been to place Montgomery in position to draw at will, in support of his own ideas, upon the strength of the entire command.

Field Marshall Montgomery, like General Patton, conformed to no type. He deliberately pursued certain eccentricities of behavior, one of which was to separate himself habitually from his staff. He lived in a trailer, surrounded by a few aides. This created difficulties in the staff work that must be performed in timely and effective fashion if any battle is to result in victory. He consistently refused to deal with a staff officer from any headquarters other than his own, and, in argument, was persistent up to the point of decision.

He is best described by himself in a letter he wrote to me shortly after the victory was won in Europe. He said:

Dear Ike:

Now that we have all signed in Berlin I suppose we shall soon begin to run our own affairs. I would like, before this happens, to say what a privilege and an honor it has been to serve under you. I owe much to your wise guidance and kindly forbearance. I know my own faults very well and I do not suppose I am an easy subordinate; I like to go my own way.

But you have kept me on the rails in difficult and stormy times, and have taught me much.

For all this I am very grateful. And I thank you for all you have done for me.

Your very devoted friend,

MONTY.

In reply I said, with complete truth:

"Your own high place among military leaders of your country is firmly fixed, and it has never been easy for me to disagree with what I knew to be your real convictions. But it will always be a great privilege to bear evidence to the fact that whenever decision was made, regardless of your personal opinion, your loyalty and efficiency in execution were to be counted upon with certainty."

Another interesting, if less pressing, discussion took place with Secretary Morgenthau. In a visit to our headquarters in early August, 1944, he said that the rate of monetary exchange, to be eventually established in Germany, should be such as to avoid giving that country any advantage. I candidly told him that I had been far too busy to be specifically concerned with the future economy of Germany but that I had an able staff section working on the problem. This brought about a general conversation on the subject of Germany's future and I expressed myself roughly as follows:

These things are for someone else to decide, but my personal opinion is that, following upon the conclusion of hostilities, there must be no room for doubt as to who won the war. Germany must be occupied. More than this, the German people must not be allowed to escape a sense of guilt, of complicity in the tragedy that has engulfed the world.

Prominent Nazis, along with certain industrialists, must be tried and punished. Membership in the Gestapo and in the S. S. should be taken as prima facie evidence of guilt. The General Staff must be broken up, all its archives confiscated, and members suspected of complicity in starting the war or in any war crime should be tried. The German nation should be responsible for reparations to such countries as Belgium, Holland, France, Luxembourg, Norway and Russia. The warmaking power of the country should be eliminated.

"Possibly this could be done by strict controls on industries using heavy fabricating machinery or by the mere expedient of preventing any manufacture of airplanes. The Germans should be permitted and required to make their own living, and should not be supported by America. Therefore choking off natural resources would be folly."

I emphatically repudiated one suggestion I had heard that the Ruhr mines should be flooded. This seemed silly and criminal to me. Finally, I said that the military government of Germany should pass from military to civil hands as quickly as this could be accomplished.

These views were presented to everyone who queried me on the subject, both then and later. They were eventually placed before the President and the Secretary of State when they came to Potsdam in July, 1945.

With 36 divisions in action in Europe, logistics became the central problem for General Eisenhower even while the Allied armies were pouring across northern France in pursuit of the Nazis. One division consumed from 600 to 700 tons of supplies every day. To bring in these supplies, without ports, over destroyed railroads and roads, was one of the major assignments of World War II.

General Eisenhower outlines this problem and the steps which were taken to meet it in the next installment of "Crusade in Europe," which will be published here tomorrow.

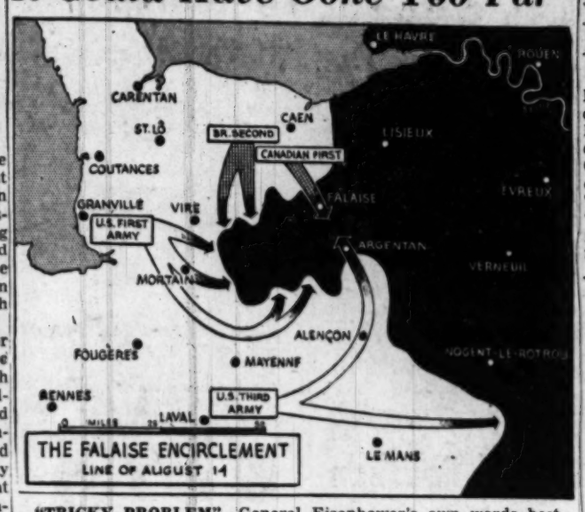
It Could Have Gone Too Far



"TRICKY PROBLEM"—General Eisenhower's own words best explain this map showing the situation around Falaise, in France, on August 14, 1944. In todays installment he writes: "With the great bulk of all the Allied forces attacking from the perimeter of a great half circle toward a common center, the determination of the exact points on which each element should halt, in order not to become involved against friendly units coming from the opposition direction, was a trick problem"

Manchester Paper Defends Eisenhower's Book on War

London, Nov. 22 (AP).—General Eisenhower's memoirs, attacked by one British newspaper as a blow to British-American friendship, were defended by the Manchester Guardian today as "honest, sincere." Lord Kemsley's Sunday Times said Eisenhower's new book, "Crusade in Europe," is "surprising and painful reading for his admirers."

The Guardian said: "There will no doubt be controversy about many things in the book, as there must be about anything that looks at the war from another side and does not take British statesmen and soldiers at their own valuation.

"But even the greatest partisans of Churchill and Montgomery must grant Eisenhower's fairmindedness and equable temper."

Free Romania Union Urged by Radescu

Former Premier Nicolas Redescu of Romania has issued an appeal to all Romanian exiles to form a new "Democratic Union of Free Romanians" to work for their country's liberation from Communist rule.

Radescu is now living in New York after a long exile in Cyprus. His all-party government was ousted on February 28, 1945, after an ultimatum presented to King Michael by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky.

The overturn of Radescu's government was the first major Soviet violation of the Yalta agreement.

The Radescu appeal, broadcast to Romania last Saturday by the "Voice of America," suggested that "a comprehensive and solid organization" be set up without delay until the creation of a Romanian National Committee, presumably representing all the non-Communist Romanian political parties.

Radescu proposed that membership in his new group be open to all Romanians, except "those who held high office under the pro-Nazi and Communist governments, as well as those who in serving foreign interests have caused harm to the national interest through their actions."

He said that more than fifty "prominent Romanians" already had said they would join the new organization.

"Our aim," he said, "is to fight until victorious for the liberation and restoration of Romania and the return of King Michael I to his rightful position as constitutional monarch." He announced that a council would be set up to direct the activities of the new union.

The National Peasant Party of Romania, which polled 70 per cent of the votes at the last constitutional election there, is already affiliated with the International Peasant Union in this country. The new Radescu organization does not necessarily represent a clash with the Peasant Union, and the Radescu statement makes clear that the new group will be made up of individuals rather than of representatives of Romanian political parties.

Russians Ban New Berlin Phone Book

Berlin, Nov. 22 (NYHT).—The fine art of censorship reached unsuspected heights today when the Soviet sector police banned the new Berlin telephone book.

Not only was distribution forbidden, but officials made a house-to-house canvass to confiscate copies already distributed. Residents of the Soviet sector were ordered to deposit any overlooked copies with officials by 6 a. m. next Monday.

The ban was imposed because the book lists Dr. Johannes Stumm as head of the Berlin police. The Soviets maintain that their man, Paul Markgraf, is the police chief.

Accordingly, they say the telephone book as printed distorts the truth.

On a somewhat graver level, a rumor circulated tonight that a plan has been drawn up in the Soviet sector to cut off elevated railway service from the western sectors of Berlin. That would seriously inconvenience the western sectors.

West Stays Reply To U. N. on Berlin

Paris, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Differences of opinion between American, British and French delegates delayed tonight the reply of the western allies to a questionaire on the Berlin currency situation.

Juan A. Bramuglia of Argentina, chairman of the United Nations Security Council, had submitted the questions in a new attempt to find a solution of the Berlin crisis.

Russia already has sent her answers. But when Philip C. Jessup, United States; Sir Alexander Cadogan, Britain, and Alexandre Parodi, France, met this evening to coordinate their replies, they could not agree on identical wording.

They will meet again Tuesday, they announced, and hope to complete their answers then, as their differences are comparatively minor.

Delegates were somewhat pessimistic of a Berlin settlement. They saw no sign any of the Big Four is ready to change its position to bring agreement.

Major obstacles are the refusal of the western allies to negotiate with Russia until she ends her blockade of Berlin, and Russia's refusal to lift the blockade until there is an agreement to make her German mark the sole legal currency for Berlin.

Reds Take Tighter Grip On Industry

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Nov. 22 (AP).—Loyal Communist Party "secretaries" will rule Czechoslovakia's industry from now on.

Workers will get first call on rationed foods or other goods.

A control committee, with power to discipline any member of the party, has been named with a Brno metalworker, Josef Kapoun, as chairman.

Party delegates virtually will supplant company directors in running industry.

The committee also favored stronger farm cooperatives.

President Klement Gottwald, chairman of the party, stood under mingled Soviet and Czechoslovak flags as he said he did not foresee any war soon, "but if one should come, we will be on the winning side."

Czech Spies Rounded Up

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 22 (U.P.). — American Counter-Intelligence Corps (CIC) agents have smashed a Czechoslovak spy ring in the Anglo-American zones of Germany with raids which netted more than 20 operatives, United States Army headquarters at Heidelberg announced today.

The men, seized November 9, "will be charged with acts prejudicial to the United States occupation and will be turned over to United States Military Government authorities," the announcement said.

It said the men were of "mixed" nationalities" acting "on behalf of Czechoslovak intelligence."

The investigation was said to have begun in December, 1946, 14 months before the Communists seized power in Czechoslovakia.

"Most of the arrests were made in the Munich area, center of the ring. Other arrests were made in the British zone," the amendment said.

The roundup was followed by a tightening of security forces along the Czechslovak-United States zone frontier.

Franco Party Sweeps Vote

Paris, Nov. 22 (NYHT).—Government quarters, whose opinion was supported by most of the Paris press, predicted tonight that Premier Henri Queuille would win his vote of confidence Tuesday afternoon from the National Assembly.

The coalition government leader had demanded the vote Friday, after a three-day debate on troop and police intervention in the recent Communist-led strikes and demonstrations. Due to a technicality, the vote actually will be taken on a Communist motion asking for an investigation of both Communist Party funds and the finances of the Socialist newspaper Le Populaire. To defeat this motion would be to back the government position.

Franco Party Elects 82% Of Councilmen

Madrid, Nov. 22 (AP).—Falange national headquarters said today 82 per cent of all city council members elected in municipal elections Sunday were members of the party. The Falange is the only legal political organization in Spain.

The elections were the first held in Spain since the civil war a decade ago.

Many observers said the voting did not reflect sentiment on the Franco government. They pointed out Spain still is without freedom of speech, press, political organization or assembly.

Greek Cabinet Asked to Quit

Athens, Greece, Nov. 22 (AP).—Opposition leaders tonight demanded the resignation of the Liberal-Populist government which won a vote of confidence by a margin of two ballots yesterday.

Former Premier George Papandreou, spokesman for the opposition, said the government of Premier Themistokles Sophoulis did not receive an "absolute majority" of parliament's votes.

Sophoulis said the "issue has been settled" by parliament and the present government best serves the country's interests.

The deputies voted to suspend parliament until February 1 to give the government a chance to launch a new program against the guerillas.

U. S. Protests Soviet U. N. Blackballing

Paris, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—The United States, complaining that the United Nations stands "powerless before the Soviet veto," called tonight for reconsideration of the six membership applications blocked by Russia.

Benjamin Cohen, in his first major speech as a delegate, said in the Special Political Committee that the General Assembly should order the Security Council to take up again the applications of Italy, Austria, Ireland, Transjordan, Portugal and, Finland, each blackballed by the Russians.

Cohen spoke after Andrei Y. Vishinsky delivered an hour-long defense of Russia's repeated vetoes of nations.

Vishinsky assailed the West for refusing to admit Albania, Bulgaria, Hungary, Romania and Outer Mongolia, all Soviet proteges.

Cohen reaffirmed America's willingness to give up the Big Five veto right when it applies to admissions.

Reds Assail Britain, U. S. on Palestine

Plans Director

Hopley Quits Top Civilian Defense Post

The White House yesterday announced the resignation of Russell Hopley of Omaha as director of civil defense planning.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross said Hopley would be succeeded by Aubrey Mellinger, retired telephone executive of Chicago. But Mellinger, after a talk with President Truman, told reporters he would make up his mind within a few days as to whether he would accept the post.

Hopley and Mellinger were accompanied to the White House by Secretary of Defense Forrestal. The latter said Mr. Truman wanted to thank Hopley for his services and to prevail upon Mellinger to become the new director.

Mellinger is chairman of the Chicago Plan Commission and formerly president of the Chicago area of the Bell Telephone Co. Hopley is president of the Northwestern Bell Telephone Co.

Hopley came here last spring, on leave from his company, to direct the planning group. It was set up by order of Secretary of Defense Forrestal.

Ex-Irgun Leader Does Disappearing Act in U. S.

New York, Nov. 22 (NYHT).—Menahem Beigen, who eluded all British efforts to capture him when he directed the Irgun Zvai Leumi in Palestine, did a disappearing act here today.

Arriving at LaGuardia Field from Paris at 6:45 a. m., more than 24 hours before he was expected, the 35-year-old leader of the Herouth (Freedom) Party in Israel, nipped right off to Washington. He will fly back to New York Tuesday to participate in a reception. The only reason given for the change in schedule was "important and pressing" business in Washington.

Paris, Nov. 22 (AP).—Russia attacked the Bernadotte plan today as a scheme to keep the Arabs of Palestine and Trans-Jordan under the domination of British and American oil interests.

Soviet Delegate Semen K. Tsarapkin told the 58-member Political Committee of the United Nations Assembly that Russia believed the proposals of Count Folke Bernadotte, slain U. N. mediator, were "prepared in the British Foreign Office."

Tsarapkin declared the British-American policy in Palestine had made a fiasco out of mediation attempts.

Tsarapkin added:

"The U. S. S. R. delegation considers that with the view to establishing peace in Palestine it is necessary to withdraw all foreign forces which are on territories of the Jewish and Arab states in Palestine, whose creation was decided by the General Assembly's decision of November 29, 1947, and that measures be taken immediately in order to prevent any further military action in Palestine."

Polish Delegate Oscar Lange joined in the attack. Referring to the United States and Britain, he said:

"Defense of an old and now crumbling empire, on the one hand, and the expansionist drive toward the establishment of a new empire, on the other, are responsible for the present situation in Palestine."

Lester B. Pearson, of Canada, said the Assembly should recognize the Jewish state, making Israel eligible for U. N. membership; create a small commission to help Jews and Arabs work out geographical and political relations, and reaffirm international control of Jerusalem.

An informed source said Australia would put before the committee Tuesday a resolution demanding that the U. N. carry out the original partition decision.

Egypt Refuses to Deal

Tel Aviv, Israel, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Egypt has informed the United Nations it will not negotiate directly with Israeli representatives on the future of the Negev desert area, an authoritative source said today.

The informant said Major General Sadek, commander of Egyptian forces in south Palestine, refused an "invitation" by United States Brig. Gen. William Riley, a deputy United Nations mediator, to discuss the situation with the Jews.

Oil Is Reported Struck In Three Negev Areas

Beersheba, Palestine, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Israeli oil men reported today that oil has been discovered in the Great Negev Desert and prospecting is under way.

Two of the three sites in which prospecting has been going forward recently fell into Israeli hands, they said, while the third area, where oil actually was found, is in no man's land. This is Jebel Usdum at the southwestern tip of the Dead Sea.

Unions Support Gallegos

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Venezuela's most powerful unions, representing some 300,000 farm and factory workers, declared their support of President Romulo Gallegos today against his Conservative Party foes.

Conservative leaders, reportedly with the support of high-ranking army officers, have been trying to compel reorganization of Gallegos' cabinet. The government has refused to yield, and Saturday decreed suspension of major constitutional guarantees to guard against a possible uprising.

U. S. Note Assails Bulgarian Trials

The United States accused Communist Bulgaria yesterday of flouting its peace treaty with an "iron curtain" trial and conviction of surviving political opponents.

The State Department said Bulgaria has now abandoned the "final pretense" of democracy.

Under the terms of its World War II peace treaty, Bulgaria agreed to give basic freedoms to its citizens.

The State Department disclosed that a strongly worded note of protest was delivered in Sofia on Saturday, denouncing charges that American officials took part in plotting against the Bulgarian government.

"Preposterous," the note said, referring to charges aired during the Sofia political trial.

In the trial a group of independent Socialist deputies, who made up the last remaining opposition in parliament to the Communist regime, received stiff prison terms ranging up to life. The leader, Kosta Lulchev, was given 15 years and heavily fined. The trial took place November 9-16.

As in political trials in other Soviet bloc countries, the prosecution charged that American officials were involved in the anti-government plotting with the nine defendents. Less than three months earlier, American Vice Consul Donald F. Ewing was expelled from Bulgaria.

The United States note, delivered in Sofia by American Minister Donald Heath, denied that any talks between Bulgarian citizens and the American political representative in the Bulgarian capital were improper. It scoffed at a prosecution assertion an American Army mess sergeant had engaged in subversive action and denied the prosecutor's charges as irresponsible.

The United States political representative during the 1945-46 period figuring in the trial was Maynard Barns.

Internationalization Plan Is Rejected

Norway has rejected an American proposal for internationalization of part of the Antarctic, diplomatic officials reported yesterday.

Norway's Ambassador to the United States, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, made known his country's opposition in a note presented to the State Department November 15.

The diplomatic official told reporters the Norwegian government put itself on record as preferring to look out for its own interest in the area. The Norwegians have claimed two large areas, Peter the First Island and Queen Maudsland.

Storm Kills 7, Injures Hundreds

(From Press Dispatches)

Bombay, India, Nov. 22. — At least seven persons were dead, hundreds injured and 25,000 homeless today in the wake of a storm which lashed Bombay last night with 80-mile winds.

All transportation and public utility services, including electricity, were disrupted and may not be restored for several days. Police patrolled the lightless city and threatened to shoot looters.

Hundreds of injured still had not been removed to hospitals because of transport difficulties.

Shipping was halted as port officials hoisted the "extreme danger" signal. Hundreds of small craft were reduced to splinters. Thousands of huts were blown away.

The swelling surf broke a sea parapet and washed away part of a jetty.

Troops were called in to clear the streets, blocked with fallen trees. One third of the city's trees were uprooted.

Crewman Berserk, Ship Radioes for Aid

New York, Nov. 22 (U.P.)—The cable repair ship John W. Mackay radioed the Coast Guard for help early today after the assistant steward drank the alcohol from the ship's compass.

Police said 18-year-old Walter Ferguson, of Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, went berserk after drinking the alcohol. It took six crewmen to subdue him.

The Coast Guard took Ferguson to shore and turned him over to police who took him to Kings County Hospital for observation.

Truman's Ohio Margin Is 7107 Officially

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 22 (AP).—President Truman's official margin over Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in Ohio was 7107 votes in the November 2 election, the State Board of Canvass announced today.

Mr. Truman captured Ohio's 25 electoral votes by receiving 1,452,791 votes to 1,445,648 for Dewey, Republican nominee.

Albert J. Anderson received 37,596 votes to lead the electors' ticket pledged to Henry A. Wallace.

The board said 3,138,724 Ohioans cast ballots. Oddly, 119,814 more votes were cast for Governor than for President.

President Walks To Work in Rain

Like most anybody, President Truman walked to work in the rain yesterday—but he seemed to enjoy it.

The Chief Executive, tanned and jovial, left his new home—the Blair House, 1651 Pennsylvania ave. nw.—at 8:10 a. m., and strode across wet pavements to an officeful of work—at the White House, just across the street.

Photographers, reporters and movie cameramen, up early to cover the event, drew smiles and jaunty greetings from Mr. Truman.

"We can't do this every morning," he said jokingly. "So get your pictures now."

Greets Other Workers

On the way to the White House—now being repaired and fireproofed—Mr. Truman passed a lot of other Government workers plodding through the rain to their jobs. He waved his gray hat and bid them a cheery good morning.

The traffic lights all flashed red as the Chief Executive crossed Pennsylvania ave., followed by four Secret Service men. An officer in the guardhouse near Blair House had telephoned to the guardhouse at the White House gate to announce that Mr. Truman was leaving. There another guard pushed a button, turning all four traffic signals in the vicinity red.

Later on the Trumans new residence, a cream-colored mansion ordinarily used to accommodate visiting dignitaries, was the setting for a Cabinet luncheon.

Newsmen Tag Along

The President strolled back to his new home with Secretary of State George Marshall at his side. As the two left the executive offices, Mr. Truman smilingly admonished reporters "not . . . to follow us across the street." Nevertheless, a crowd of newsmen and photographers tagged behind until they reached the White House gate.

There Mr. Truman remarked to photographers, "That's enough."

The Blair House was prepared for the Trumans while the First Family was vacationing at Key West, Fla. They moved in on their return Sunday.

result of the Democratic victory on November 2.

Whole Field Covered

President Truman talked to Secretary Marshall for about an hour in the White House and then walked across Pennsylvania Avenue with him to the Blair-Lee House for a Cabinet luncheon.

Press Secretary Ross, meeting with reporters later in the White House press room, said that the President's meeting with Marshall was "very informative."

"Their discussion," he said, "ranged over the whole field of our foreign relations."

English Earl Selling Fruit and Vegetables

London, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—England's Earl of Shrewsbury has set up a fruit and vegetable business, which he personally attends to, on the road in front of his 8000-acre estate, it was disclosed today.

The 33-year-old Shrewsbury, whose title dates back to 1442, said he went in the business to help save the estate, hit by "crippling taxation," and cost of maintenance.

14 Turkeys Stolen As Man Buys Fixin's

New York, N. Y., Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Walter Keinheim drove up to a market today to buy cranberries, stuffing and all the trimmings.

When he finished his shopping, he explained to police, he discovered a thief had stolen his car and the 14 turkeys inside it.

Photographer Calls Blair Job a 'Nightmare'

Jean St. Thomas, a 41-year-old Paris-born photographer, says very frankly that taking pictures of Blair House was a "nightmare."

St. Thomas

There were all kinds of difficulties involved in doing a "job to end all jobs" on the current Presidential home—and that was his assignment from the State Department. (See Page 3-C for a full page of Blair House pictures.)

Because the circuits of the house "couldn't stand powerful lights," he had to move his lighting equipment around—exposing first one corner, then another.

"A dark rug would have looked like a coal mine," he explained, "if I'd had to depend on a 40 watt bulb."

So he "used all sorts of devices to conceal lights behind furniture and chairs."

Then there were the Pennsylvania ave. streetcars.

The bump bump, he soon discovered, created minor havoc with cameras — yielding blurred pictures. So he posted one aide on an outside stoop, another at a window—and received continuous messages on the status of the trolleys.

Because he felt interiors could be done best with little "interference" from natural lighting—and also to reduce the annoyances from passing streetcars, St. Thomas worked at night. He usually began at 6 p. m., working as late as 1 or 2 a. m. and turning out an average of one shot a night.

A tall, suave Frenchman, St. Thomas began his career in photography in 1927.

Since 1946, he's been chief of the technical photographic division of the Civil Aeronautics Administration. Married, he lives at 2801 15th st. nw.

Flier Gets 1 Year Suspended, $500 Fine for Nurse Assault

A Bolling Air Force Base pilot was fined $500 and given a year's suspended sentence yesterday for assault and battery on a 23-year-old Doctors Hospital nurse.

Circuit Court Judge Charles C. Marbury at Upper Marlboro, Md., told Lieut. William A. Dawes, jr., 28, he was releasing him on probation in the expectation he would be leaving the Army and would return to his estranged wife in Atlanta, Ga., and reestablish himself as a decent citizen and family man. Dawes will have to serve 12 months in the Maryland House of Correction if he is found violating parole.

Dawes had been convicted of assault and battery but acquitted of rape and assault with intent to commit rape. He was recently disciplined by the Army over an affair with a girl in Portland, Me., the court said, and the Metropolitan Police sex squad had a report from a woman who said she had had "similar trouble" with the lieutenant but refused to press charges.

Dawes, who won the Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal and Presidential Citation in the war, pleaded that seven years of happy marriage was broken up by frequent transfers in the service which finally caused his wife to leave him and return to Atlanta. He said he hoped to return there as a civilian, effect a reconciliation and go to work for his father, a contractor.

AFL Elects Green For His 25th Term

Cincinnati, Nov. 22 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor re-elected 75-year-old William Green to his twenty-fifth term as president today and adjourned its sixty-seventh annual convention.

Green pledged the organization to make repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act its first goal.

"It is the dawn of a new day, a new experience, a new opportunity for the AFL," Green said after delegates gave him a rousing demonstration. He has been president since the death of Samuel Gompers in December, 1924.

Secretary - Treasurer George Meany and the 13 vice presidents on the executive council also were reelected without opposition.

St. Paul was chosen as the site of the next convention beginning October 3, 1949.

The convention adopted a committee report formally demanding repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act and restoration of the Wagner Labor Relations Act. From these, the AFL would favor building amendments based on 13 years' experience under both labor laws.

In the discussion of legislation, Charles J. MacGowan, head of the boilermakers, said "labor is not contemplating a wave of strikes."

Delegates applauded when MacGowan said, "instead of agitating for a general fourth-round of wage increases, the entire citizenry should concentrate on achieving a rollback of prices to defeat the inflationary spiral and to stabilize our economy."

Calling for outright repeal, instead of amendment to the labor law, MacGowan said "the whole texture of that legislation is so filled with booby traps that to undertake the amendment would be folly and would leave us with a continuing disturbed industrial situation."

Woodruff Randolph, head of the International Typographical Union, reviewed the troubles of his union in its fight to retain the closed shop, outlawed by the Taft-Hartley Act.

Randolph told the convention his union had spent nine milion dollars in the 15 months since the law became effective. Most of that went as benefits to Chicago newspaper printers who have been on strike for a full year. The ITU is paying the strikers $60 and $40 weekly for married and unmarried members, respectively.

The convention also adopted a report of its international labor relations committee, calling for a defensive military alliance of free nations against Soviet Russia. The report also suggested severing trade relations with Russia until the Berlin blockade is lifted.

The executive council meets Tuesday. Council members, whose titles as vice presidents were restored at this convention, are, in the order of their seniority:

William L. Hutcheson of the Carpenters, Matthew Woll of the Photo-engravers, Joseph N. Weber of the Musicians, George M. Harrison of the Railway Clerks, Daniel J. Tobin of the Teamsters, Harry C. Bates of the Bricklayers, William D. Mahon of the Street, Railway and Motor Coach Employes, W. C. Birthright of the Barbers, William C. Doherty of the Letter Carriers, David Dubinsky of the Ladies Garment Workers, Charles J. MacGowan of the Boilermakers, Herman Winter of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers and Daniel W. Tracy of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Dock Strike Offer Rejected

diverted to Halifax. The crew walked off Saturday an hour before sailing in sympathy with the American strikers.

Departure of the Queen Elizabeth originally was scheduled for last Wednesday, but was postponed until Saturday because of the longshoremen's strike. Then the liner's crew walked off just before sailing time Saturday.

The delay already has cost Cunard White Star about 30,000 pounds ($120,000).

The Elizabeth's sister ship, the Queen Mary, also is affected. The Queen Mary was scheduled to sail next Wednesday, but her departure has been postponed indefinitely.

Between 50 and 100 passengers, in too much of a hurry to wait on board, left the Queen Elizabeth last night and today to seek faster transportation.

[The United Press said most of the 1100 pasesngers were remaining aboard "where the cocktail lounges are open, movies are being shown and there are plenty of cigarettes." It said the delay is costing the Cunard White Star Line about $20,000 a day. — Editor's Note.]

The teamsters' walkout brought these immediate results:

1. Severely curtailed the movement of freight from the New York Central and Pennslyvania Railroad yards.

2. The Pennsylvania Railroad imposed an embargo on New York-bound freight of less than carload lots. Freight for the armed forces and medical supplies to physicians are exempt.

The commercial and industrial machinery of the greater New York area already has been greatly affected by the shipping strike.

John J. O'Rourke, president of Local 282, AFL Teamsters, of which the truck drivers are members, said the men would stay out until they get the increase. Hugh E. Sheridan, impartial chairman of the New York City trucking industry, said the strike "was no calamity" and that "most fodstuff is rolling."

Bisgyer Lauds Truman's Stand On Palestine

President Truman was praised last night for his stand on the Palestine question.

The praise came from Maurice Bisgyer, national secretary of B'nai B'rith, who recently returned from conferences in Israel, during an address before an estimated 1000 persons at the Jewish Community Center, 16th and Q sts. nw.

"B'nai B'rith leaders always had faith that the President would bring about adherence to the partition decision of the United Nations," Bisgyer said.

He contended that difficulties between the Arabs and Jews would have been settled long ago "if it had not been for Great Britain's influence there."

Last night's program was sponsored by the Washington Metropolitan Council of B'nai B'rith.

Religion in Nation Called 'Enemy No. 1' of Communists

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

The House Committee on Un-American Activities yesterday branded two Protestant clergymen "open-type" Communist Party members, and declared that Communists are trying to corrupt religion in the Nation.

In a 16-page question and answer pamphlet entitled "100 Things You Should Know About Communism and Religion," the committee asserted that "in all their plans and actions the Communists mark down religion as Enemy No. 1."

Such youth organizations as the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations and the Epworth League now the Methodist Youth Fellowship are Communist targets, the pamphlet declared.

"You cannot be a Communist and believe in God. You cannot believe in God and have a peaceable life under communism," the committee report asserts.

The Communist Party in the United States assigns members to join churches and church organizations "to take control where possible and in any case to influence thought and action toward Communist ends," it charged.

The report also stated that the party attempts to get prominent religious leaders to support Communist policies, disguised as welfare work

It states that if communism came to the United States, churches and synagogues would be taken over by the Government and every copy of the Bible destroyed.

The two clergymen named by the committee were the Rev. Claude C. Williams and the Rev. Eliot White. Mr. Williams, the pamphlet stated, was expelled by his congregation "for party activity." They are not as important as others who have joined "10, 20 or 30" Communist front organizations, it adds.

Mr. White was described as a "retired Episcopalian minister who served as a delegate to a Communist convention and lectured at Communist meetings." Mr. White, according to the United Press, lives in Poselle, N. J.

Mr. Williams heads the People's Institute of Applied Religion, Birmingham, Ala., which the committee called "one of the most vicious Communist organizations ever set up in this country." The institute, the committee said, "teaches Communist ideas, pretending that they are Christian ideas."

Also labeled a "tool" of the party was the Methodist Federation for Social Action, 150 Fifth ave., New York. The federation, the pamphlet added, is not an official church organization, but is using the prestige of the Methodist Church to promote the party line.

In New York, the Rev. Jack R. McMichael, executive director of the Methodist Federation for Social Action, declared that the charges are "ridiculous and untrue," according to the Associated Press. He said the federation is a democratic fellowship of 20 Methodist bishops, 5571 pastors and church members, founded in 1907 and the "original source of the social creed" of the Methodist Church.

The Protestant, published by Protestant Digest, Inc., 521 5th ave., New York, is called a magazine which "fanatically spreads Communist propaganda under the guise of being a religious journal."

Not connected with any official organization, The Protestant boasts support of 6000 ministers and proposes to "build a bridge" between Christendom and communism, the pamphlet states. Kenneth Leslie is named as editor of The Protestant, and associate editors listed in the report are James Luther Adams, John Hammond and Gerald Richardson.

The Associated Press quoted Leslie as saying "The Protestant is under attack by the political agents of cartels because we have broken the smooth face of the Christian front against the Soviets. We used the phrase 'Christian-Communist two-way bridge,' meaning that ideas must come from both sides to make a common understanding."

Alertness Aids Stricken Woman

The Washington Post
MRS. ROSA LEE BOWLING
Telephone Operator

Faint Call Traced To Aid Ill Woman

A 26-year-old switchboard operator brought emergency aid to a woman stricken from high blood pressure yesterday after tracing a faint anonymous call for help.

Mrs. Rosa Lee Bowling, 130 U st. nw., saw a light flash on her board at 7:29 a. m. at the Dupont exchange of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., 14th and R sts. nw.

"Get me Emergency Hospital," said a faint voice.

"Just a moment, I'll connect you," answered Mrs. Bowling.

"No, you get it for me," said the caller, weakly. Then the receiver clicked down.

The operator kept the line plugged on her board. She rang back, but got no answer. She did not know who had called, or from what number.

Thanks to Mrs. Bowling's alertness, however, police arrived within 30 minutes at 1300 Saratoga ave. ne., where they found Mrs. A. E. Crawford, 50, almost unconscious on her divan.

She was rushed to Casualty Hospital, where she was treated and permitted to return home late yesterday.

To solve the puzzle of who made the call, Mrs. Bowling enlisted the aid of Mrs. Dorothy Ohlen, chief assistant operator, and telephone technicians.

They traced electrical impulses registered on the complicated dial system, made possible by Mrs. Bowling's presence of mind in leaving the call plugged in. After 17 minutes the number had been identified as on a two-party line.

Schoeneman Called In Textron Probe

Boston, Nov. 22 (AP).—A flat demand that the United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue join Democratic Chairman J. Howard McGrath as a witness in a hearing on Textron incorporated came today from a Senate subcommittee.

United States Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.), committee head, wired the demand to Commissioner George J. Schoeneman as he reopened a hearing on which McGrath is due to take the witness stand Wednesday.

Tobey called on Schoeneman to appear tomorrow and warned if he didn't the committee would send "another request in a different form."

In the fourth session of the investigation of the textile corporation, which did a 125-million dollar business last year, its president, Royal Little, testified that in one of his stock deals he was "trying to help" stage and screen actress Helen Hayes.

The committee brought out that Little as a trustee for one trust sold stock to Alfred MacArthur of Chicago, brother-in-law of Miss Hayes, for $50,000 less than he bought the same amount of stock at about the same time in a separate transaction.

Little contended that he sold the stock for $25 a share and bought it for $30 a share but that the difference was not a difference in the real value of the stock but "depended on the circumstances." MacArthur's total purchase was 10,000 shares for $250,000, Little said.

Little said he met Miss Hayes when she starred on a Textron sponsored radio show.

"She told me," Little testified, "she had worked hard all her life and what did she have to show for it.

Senator Tobey interrupted with: "You mean you used that stock sale as a sweetener to get Helen Hayes' services?"

Little answered: "That's right, sir."

Little contended later, however, that he couldn't see any connection between the two stock transactions in which there was a total difference of $50,000.

Tobey's wire to Commissioner Schoeneman stated:

"When the little people of this country are ordered to pay taxes, if they fail to do so promptly, the Bureau of Internal Revenue comes down on 'hem like a ton of bricks. No different consideration should apply in the case of this $4,500,000 trust . . . If you fail to appear before the sub-committee tomorrow you will do so on your own responsibility.

"The people are going to get an explanation, and if you ignore this request, you will at a later date receive from the subcommittee another request in a different form."

Famed 'Flying Machine' Is Home to Stay

AFTER 20 YEARS—Packed in three crates, the Wright Brothers' original airplane, the Kitty Hawk, came to Washington to stay yesterday, after 20 years in England. The largest of the three crates is shown being rolled through the National Air Museum here noon in a Navy trailer truck marked 'United States Navy, Operation Homecoming."

Kitty Hawk Comes Home

Accompanied by an automobile bearing Paul E. Garber, curator of the Smithsonian's National Air Museum, and H. Roy Waite, who bought and flew a Wright plane in 1911, the Kitty Hawk rolled through Washington under motorcycle police escort to a place of honor at the celebration—but it was still invisible.

Despite rain, several hundred spectators gathered while Army, Navy and Air Force bands struck up martial music and color guards from the services, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Boy Scouts stood at salute.

William P. McCracken, chief of the Division of Civil Air Commerce, who holds the No. 1 CAA pilot's license, said Orville Wright always regretted that his and his brother Wilbur's invention had "inflicted so much fear, suffering and destruction through its military use.

The Wrights wanted their invention turned to peaceful civilian uses, and it did unlock the door "which led to the great commercial air transportation of today," said McCracken, who was a close friend of Orville Wright until the latter's death last January 30.

Leon Chatelain, jr., president of the Washington Board of Trade, on behalf of the District Commissioners, hailed the arrival of "the fragile craft which is forever associated with the first flight."

The Kitty Hawk's return will be formally celebrated on December 17, the forty-fifth anniversary of its historic flight, when it will go on display at the National Air Museum.

Fight Planned For Key Bills

Dewey would name his successor. He obviously would appoint a Republican, thus trimming the Democratic margin in the new Senate from 12 to 11.

An interesting angle of the Administration's predicament is this: if Wagner steps down from the chair, and the seniority rule is followed, only Maybank stands between Senator Glen H. Taylor, Idaho's Wallace Progressive, and the Banking Committee chairmanship.

Maybank told newsmen he expects to perform in the new Congress much as he did in the last, when he went to bat for housing, rent control, public power and other Administration measures but drew the line at civil rights.

He predicted the Senate will pass a long-range housing bill, with virtually the same public housing, farm housing and slum clearance features the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill carried when it last cleared the Senate.

He came out for a full year's extension of the rent control law, expiring March 31, but said the law may need some revision to end the "black market" in some rental housing. He said he was referring to cases "where they put a pair of draperies in a house, and use that as an excuse to raise the rent.

"We need a law that will protect honorable tenants and honorable landlords," he said.

Maybank said he wanted to study inflationary trends before he indorsed any specific price control measures, and said there may even be some adjustment in prices before Congress meets.

2-Year Term In 5c Killing

An Alexandria janitor was sentenced to prison for two years yesterday in Alexandria Corporation Court for killing a man after an argument over a 5-cent bag of "pork skins."

Theodore Roosevelt McCray, 508 N. Columbus st., admitted shooting General A. Johnson, 24-year-old laborer, September 4, but claimed it was in self-defense.

McCray said he was tending store for a friend when Johnson picked up and ate the package of fried pork bits.

Johnson finally paid, McCray said, but the episode provoked an argument, which culminated in McCray firing a gun taken from the cash drawer as, he claimed Johnson approached him.

Commonwealth's Attorney Howard W. Smith, jr., asked the jury for a first-degree murder conviction and the death penalty.

Inaugural Concert Shifted to Armory

Site for the Inaugural Concert yesterday was moved from Constitution Hall to the National Guard Armory because of the "tremendous importance of the concert."

Melvin D. Hildreth, general chairman of the inaugural committee, announced the shift yesterday after conferring with the District Commissioners on plans for the inaugural week.

At the same time, William M. Boyle, assistant to Senator Howard McGrath and chairman of the Inaugural Committee on White House Liaison, spent most of the afternoon yesterday conferring with White House aides on details of the celebration.

President Truman has expressed general approval of the plan so far, Boyle said. However, specific details of the presidential family's participation in inaugural week have not yet been decided upon.

In describing plans for the concert, Hildreth said the Armory stage would be divided into two sections, so that sets may be prepared on one section while the performance continues on the other.

Also slated for the Armory, Hildreth explained, is the traditional Inauguration Ball, which will be held January 20, and will be "by invitation only." Price for the fete has been set at $10 per person. He explained it would be for "distinguished Americans," and that dress will be formal.

The inaugural chairman announced yesterday that by agreement with Interior Undersecretary Oscar L. Chapman, museums under the jurisdiction of that department will be kept open at night during the inaugural period for the benefit of visitors.

Postlude

Lecuona Plays His Latin Tunes

By Paul Hume

Ernesto Lecuona and a traveling troupe of entertainers drew one of Constitution Hall's smallest audiences last night.

Lecuona is best known in this composer, appeared as composer and pianist, with Rosita Segovia, Spanish dancer, and several singers.

The entire program was composed of music by Lecuona, with the exception of a few popular songs such as La Paloma.

While the singing and playing was acceptable enough, the entire occasion seemed to indicate that the public today does not care to attend a concert of music of such light weight.

Lecuona is best known in this country for a piano piece called "Malaguena," now audible in juke boxes. His music is stamped with the rhythms and melodies of our Latin neighbors, but these very characteristics pall after a short time.

Unless unmistakable marks of artistic stature are present, or unless an artist has a steady following it is difficult to attract with any program of music most of which is constantly heard on the air.

Martin Wants Guild to Leave World Group

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Harry Martin, Memphis, president of the American Newspaper Guild (CIO), said today he would recommend that the guild withdraw from the International Organization of Journalists (IOJ).

Martin walked out of a meeting of the IOJ on November 18 in Budapest in protest of Eastern delegates' attack on the United States.

He told newsmen on his arrival by plane from Europe that he would make his recommendation when the guild's executive board meets in February.

He also will recommend that the guild join with British, Scandinavian and "other free newspaper unions" in the formation of a new international body, he added.

Delay Urged In Picking Site Of FAO Home

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

After four days of argument, Commission III of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization voted yesterday to recommend postponing action on FAO's permanent site until next year.

The entire 57-nation conference will vote on the recommendation at plenary session today at the Shoreham Hotel.

Washington, with seven sites proposed, Copenhagen and Rome had made offers for the permanent headquarters. Later, a site in New York and one in Innsbruck, Austria, were offered. The commission voted to postpone action, 22 to 17, with a dozen members either absent or not voting. The United States did not vote. Supporters of delay argued that more offers might be received if the four-year-old question was put off again.

With only an hour's debate Commission I voted to recommend that next year's conference be held in Havana, Cuba. That also will have to be ratified by the conference today.

Cooks Offered Turkey Tips

body cavities with salt. Wash the giblets, too. Cover gizzard, heart and neck with salted hot water and simmer two to three hours. Add liver during the last 25 minutes. Remove meat from neck and grind or chop with giblets to add to the gravy or stuffing.

Final Preparations

Allow one cup of dressing per pound of bird (New York dressed weight), and don't pack it into the body and neck cavity too tightly. It may burst the turkey when it expands, or it may just get soggy. Skewer neck skin to back. Stick skewers across the abdominal cavity, too, and lace it up by hooking string about the skewer ends. Fold wing tips up neatly over the back of the turkey's neck. Tie legs together and fasten to tail with string.

Best roasting is slow cooking by dry heat on a rack in an open pan. This takes no water, no basting and no cover. A shallow, open pan lets the heat circulate around the bird, roasting it evenly. A rack at least half an inch high keeps the bird off the bottom of the pan and free of the juices.

Some cooks use a V-shaped rack, in which the turkey fits breast down. With a flat rack, it's best to tip the bird so one side rests on rack. Turn turkey during roasting so the other side touches rack and both sides cook evenly. Grease skin thoroughly with softened cooking fat. Cover top and sides with fat-moistened cloth—preferably clean white cheese cloth—before placing in preheated oven.

How Long to Cook Him?

Now that the turkey is in the stove, how long to leave him? Here are the figures:

	Oven Temperature (Degrees)	Cook. Time per Pound (Minutes)	Cook. Time per Bird (Hours)
8 to 10 lbs.	325	25 to 20	3 to 3½
10 to 14 lbs.	325	20 to 18	3½ to 4
14 to 18 lbs.	300	18 to 15	4 to 4½
18 lbs.	300	15 to 13	4½ to 5
20 lbs.	300	15 to 13	5 to 6

If the cloth dries out as the turkey cooks, moisten with fat from bottom of pan. And if breast meat browns too slowly, turn breast side up when three fourths done.

And, oh yes, the gravy. No lumps, now—not if you use this method: Pour drippings from the roaster into a bowl. Skim off 3 tablespoons of fat and blend thoroughly with 3 tablespoons flour. Set fat and flour mixture over low heat, stirring constantly. Cook until frothy; then add 2 cups cold liquid all at once. (Use stock from cooking giblets, juice from pan, milk or water.) Stir constantly until thickened. Boil briskly about 5 minutes. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Thrilling Rescue In a Raging Sea

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

"NEVER AGAIN"—That was the reaction of Mrs. C. A. Gould, jr., 22, who is shown being lowered in a bosun's chair to a Coast Guard boat from Fowey Rock lighthouse, Miami, Fla., yesterday, when heavy seas made normal transfer impossible. She was one of seven who took refuge there when their cabin cruiser became disabled

Turkey Prices Here Range From 65 to 95 Cents a Pound

The traditional Thanksgiving turkey will cost the Greater Washington housewife between 65 and 95 cents a pound this year.

Advertised prices are generally from 14 to 16 cents higher than last year.

The majority of stores in the area set a price of 65 cents a pound for tom turkeys, ranging in weight from 14 pounds upward, and 73 to 75 cents for the smaller—and less plentiful—hen birds. These prices were for "New York dressed" turkeys.

The ready-for-the-oven, or eviscerated, turkeys were advertised by a few stores at 85, 89 or 95 cents a pound.

Fred Kolker, chairman of the poultry division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, predicted it would be hard to find a hen turkey by tonight and before Thursday prices for the hens may increase to somewhere near 85 cents, one dealer said.

Although the national supply of the birds is reported to be the smallest in 10 years, turkeys from Maryland, Virginia, Delaware and Pennsylvania are in better supply.

Growers in this area raised more "apartment sized" birds such as the Beltsville Whites this year, but an unexpected export demand for these developed early in the season to claim part of the crop, according to R. Frank Frazier, executive secretary of the Virginia Poultry Federation.

Daily Prayer for Peace Started by Legion Post

A one-minute prayer for peace, every day at noon—members of Cissel-Saxon Post, American Legion, Silver Spring, have started it.

Their aim: "A just and enduring peace for the world." They ask that other organizations join in to make the noon minute-prayers universal.

A resolution adapted by the post voices confidence "in the ability of our fellowmen, with the aid of God, to secure an adjustment of international differences leading toward an equitable and abiding peace."

Building Is Leased For Navy Research

A New York engineering firm will conduct Navy ordnance research, beginning February 1, in a building now occupied by the Silver Spring Bowling Alleys, 936 Wayne ave., it was revealed yesterday.

A three-year lease between the Kellex Corp. and Eugene J. C. Raney, owner of the building, was disclosed by Dr. G. R. Tatum, director of the firm's Silver Spring laboratory.

The firm is now conducting its research in the Johns Hopkins applied physics laboratories, and the move is necessitated by lack of space at the two laboratories in Silver Spring, it was said.

Dr. Tatum said the Kellex Corp. had operated the laboratories jointly with Johns Hopkins from March, 1946, to last August 1, when the arrangement was dissolved.

The Kellex firm is a subsidiary of the M. W. Kellog Co., New York, which in turn is owned by Pullman, Inc., the railroad sleeping car manufacturers.

Sightseeing Lines Oppose ICC Control

Sightseeing bus operators running between Washington and Mount Vernon told an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing yesterday they should continue to be exempt from the Interstate Commerce Act.

Under the act, the carriers would be required to obtain a permit from the ICC and abide by its regulations governing joint fares, equipment and facilities. The commission listed 117 persons and firms it said were regularly operating between the Capital and Mount Vernon without common carrier certificates.

Attorneys for the operators contended that a provision in the act exempting carriers transporting persons in or around national memorials applies to their clients and that control should come from the Department of Interior as provided for in the law.

A. J. Knox, senior attorney for the National Capital Park Service, stated that the Department of Interior, while having authority in such cases, does not exercise it beyond requiring a $3 yearly permit.

He closed the hearing after six hours testimony and ordered briefs of the hearing to be presented to the commission on December 22. The commission will then study the briefs and issue their report.

Rent Hike Hearing Scheduled Today

District Rent Examiner James G. Tyson will hold a hearing today at 9:30 a. m. on a proposed rent increase on 250 apartments at Ordway Gardens, 2700 block of Ordway and Porter sts. nw.

Present rents range from $30 for one-room units to $84.50 a month for four rooms. Requested rents are from $33.50 to $93. The hearing will be at 1720 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Rent Examiner Denis K. Lane held a hearing yesterday on a proposed 15 per cent increase on 43 apartments at 2109 F st. nw. Sidney Goldstein, attorney for 41 of the tenants, opposed the increase. Lane took the matter under advisement.

Traffic Case Continued Against Bus Driver

Two charges of traffic violations against an Alexandria bus driver whose vehicle was said to have struck a woman pedestrian Saturday were continued yesterday in Alexandria Police Court until December 8.

Joseph C. Hill, 27, of 827 Wolfe st., driver for the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. was charged with reckless driving and failure to give a pedestrian the right of way, and released on $250 bond.

Mrs. Elsie Yowell, of Route 1, Alexandria, who was knocked down at King and Pitts sts., was reported in satisfactory condition at Atlexandria Hospital.

3 Innkeepers, 3 Bartenders Held in Sunday Liquor Sales

Three proprietors of Prince Georges County taverns and three bartenders were free on $500 bond apiece yesterday following a police crackdown Sunday on illicit whisky sales.

Those arrested, all of whom will get a hearing in Hyattsville Police Court December 2, are:

Thomas V. Whalen, 66, proprietor of the White Horse Tavern on Rhode Island ave. in Brentwood; Paul L. Piper, 44, bartender at the tavern; Mrs. Bessie Gibson, 44, proprietor of Tick-Tock Tavern, University Lane and Riggs rd., near College Park, Md.; Walter Longcobe, bartender there; Walter P. McLean, 28, proprietor of the M and S Tavern, Central ave., Capitol Heights and Ernest F. Guy, 63, his bartender.

The proprietors were charged with permitting the sale of liquor Sunday while the bartenders were charged with the actual sale.

By prearranged plan, Police Pvt. Wallace L. Baker, operating in plain clothes, visited the establishments Sunday night making whisky "buys," police said. Baker then swore out warrants which were served by Cpl. Reginald Austin and Pvts. J. P. Kearns and Ralph Bond. The policemen did not interfere with customers.

Prince Georges Police Chief Ralph Brown said officers would make regular visits to county taverns each Sunday in a drive to stamp out illegal sales.

Plaques Honor 4 Justices, Doctor

Four deceased Chief Justices of the United States and a Washington physician were honored yesterday at ceremonies marked by formal presentation of plaques to their memory in the District of Columbia Medical Society Auditorium.

The indoor exercises, sponsored jointly by the Columbia Historical Society and the District Bar Association, were followed by a "token" unveiling of one of the plaques at the former home of Chief Justice Edward Douglass White, 1717 Rhode Isluand ave. nw. Plans to unveil the other four memorials were canceled due to inclement weather.

Honored, in addition to White, were Chief Justices Melville Fuller, who formerly lived at 1801 F st. nw.; William Howard Taft, 2215 Wyoming ave. nw., and Harlan Fiske Stone, 2340 Wyoming ave. nw., and Dr. Joseph Meredith Toner, first president of the Columbia Historical Society and a former president of the District Medical Society, who lived at 1445 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Presentation of a plaque to the memory of the late Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes had been scheduled, but was eliminated from the program because the memorial had not been completed.

The program was featured by five speakers who outlined briefly the careers of the deceased Chief Justices and Dr. Toner. The eulogies were delivered by J. Austin Latimer of the District Bar Association to Chief Justice White; by George E. McNeill of the District Bar Association to Chief Justice Fuller; by Associate Justice Harold H. Burton to Chief Justice Taft; by Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, to Chief Justice Stone, and by Parke P. Jones of the Columbia Historical Society, to Dr. Toner.

Other speakers were the Rt. Rev. John M. McNamara, Catholic Auxiliary Bishop of Washington, who pronounced invocation; F. Regis Noel, president of the Columbia Historical Society; Lowry N. Coe, president of the District Bar Association, and the Rev. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church, who gave benediction.

Participants in the program included Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson and Attorney General Tom C. Clark, neither of whom spoke.

Following the exercises in the auditorium, the plaque at the former home of Chief Justice White, a block distant, was unveiled by Josephine Noel, 7-year-old niece of the president of the Columbia Historical Society. The informal unveiling was witnessed by about 50 persons, about half of the number who attended the earlier program.

Officials of the two societies said the remaining four plaques will be installed in the next few days without formal exercises.

Breen Safe After Forced Landing

Glidden, Wis., Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Singer Bobby Breen, missing since yesterday on an airplane flight, was found here today on the eastern edge of the dense Chequamegon National Forest.

Breen walked into a tavern in this small town and announced that his chartered airplane had been forced to land.

Al Peterson, tavern owner, said that Breen was "all right."

"He walked right into my place and asked what all the fuss was about," Peterson said.

A fleet of Air Force and civilian planes had been mobilized to search for Breen in the northern Wisconsin wilderness. Breen gained fame on the Eddie Cantor radio program.

Lye for Rival Kills Sweetheart

Van Buren, Me., Nov. 22 (U.P.)—A jealous farmhand was arrested on a murder charge today after a gay party in which his sweetheart climbed on his knee and drained a mixture of beer and lye he had prepared for two love rivals.

Horrified, Carl Peterson, 39, of Fort Fairfield, saw the woman he planned to marry clutch at her throat and fall to the floor. She was dead before a doctor arrived.

Peterson confessed, saying two Canadians "were making a play for my girl."

He told police he placed the mixture on a table between Martin Marczrole and Gene Cote, farm laborers, in hopes that one, or both, would take a drink.

But 21-year-old Mrs. Yvonne Pelletier Poitras came by. Before he could stop her, she reached out for the glass and downed the beer.

Police said Mrs. Poitras reeled about in agony for 25 minutes and tried to end her torment with a butcher knife.

AVC to Sponsor Art Discussion

A panel discussion, "Are Our Art Galleries Fulfilling Their Responsibilities?" will be sponsored tonight at 8:30 o'clock by the American Veterans Committee at the AVC clubhouse, 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw.

The galleries will be represented by John Palmer Leeper, of the Corcoran Art Gallery, and James H. Whyte, of the Whyte Gallery. Dr. Raymond Stites, of the National Gallery, and Dr. James W. Herring, of Howard University, will speak for the educators. The artists' viewpoint will be presented by Pietro Lazzari, artist and sculptor, and Leon Berkowitz, of the Washington Workshop. Moderator will be Joseph G. Cowell, of the National Art School.

Auto Radio Causes 4-Car Collision

A womap's reach for her auto radio dial touched off a freak, four-car collision, Arlington police reported yesterday.

They said Miss Nell R. Bennett, 29, of 1711 East Capitol st., Washington, was sitting in the right front seat of the car Sunday evening in the parking lot of the Rosslyn Hot Shoppe Restaurant when the accident happened.

Reaching for the radio dial, Miss Bennett brushed against the car's gear-shift lever. The auto, its motor idling while the driver was in the restaurant, lurched into reverse.

According to police, it struck a car driven by Earl May, 40, of 3841 Calvert st. nw., then nudged a second car driven by Alden W. Wood, 44, of 2246 49th st. nw., which in turn hit a third one driven by Wallace E. Gramlick, 34, of 4700 N. Second st., Arlington.

Police estimated total damage to the four cars at $200.

Motorists, Take a Tip From This Ruling of Supreme Court: Don't Leave Key in Parked Car; If It Crashes You're Liable

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

If you leave your parked car with the ignition key in it, and someone steals the car and is involved in an accident, you can be liable for the damages.

And it may not help you even if the car was left on private property.

The Supreme Court yesterday upheld such a decision which was made in District Court and affirmed by the United States Court of Appeals here.

In other cases of area interest, the court yesterday refused to review the conviction of Mrs. Minnie Harris, 38, sentenced to 15 years to life imprisonment for the murder of her union-official husband here in April, 1947.

In the vehicle liability case a truck driver for R. W. Claxton, Inc., seafood dealer of 406 12th st. sw., on May 7, 1941 stopped at the rear of the Fat Boy Restaurant, New York ave. and Bladensburg rd. ne., to deliver "7½ pounds of halibut."

According to briefs in the case, the ignition key was left in the truck and two employes of the restaurant got in the truck while the driver was gone, and later hit an automobile containing Boyd F. Schaff of Falls Church and four others.

Schaff and the others sued, but the Claxton company first won a directed verdict. The ignition key did not figure in this suit because an earlier Court of Appeals decision held that leaving such a key was not negligence. But the Court of Appeals reversed itself in 1943, holding a jury should decide if leaving a key constituted "a proximate cause of the accident."

Schaff and the others sued again, winning a $5400 verdict.

Mrs. Harris' Appeal

In Mrs. Harris' unsuccessful appeal, she said a letter signed by a "Jimmy Cohen" confessing he murdered her husband, James Harris, business agent for the Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers Union (CIO), should not have been admitted in evidence.

At the trial, a handwriting expert testified that the "Jimmy Cohen" letter was in Mrs. Harris' handwriting. Harris was found hacked to death in the Harris home at 3120 13th st. nw.

The high court agreed to review the murder conviction of a Baltimore Negro who charged there had been a "long continued and systematic exclusion of Negroes selected for grand jury duty in the city of Baltimore."

The claim of unequal representation of Negroes on Baltimore's grand juries was made in the form of a pauper's suit by Sam Zimmerman, indicated in 1946 and sentenced to life imprsonment.

Replying in a written brief, Attorney General Hall Hammond of Maryland denied the charge, saying three Negroes were named for the jury panel in question, but two declined to serve. In 1942, Hammond said, in a similar charge, the District Court there did find violation of the "equal protection" clause of the Fourteenth Amendment and directed remedial steps, which Hammond said were later taken.

Hammond noted that Zimmerman charged that from 1910 to 1944 each grand jury in Baltimore City contained only one Negro member. Said Hammond, "Since 1944 a conscious and purposeful attempt has been made to broaden the base from which juries, both grand and petit, are selected."

Portal Pay Law Proviso Is Upheld

Another major portion of the portal-to-portal law—that which exempts employers from paying back-wage claims if failure to pay was based on "good faith"—was upheld in effect by the Supreme Court yesterday.

The Supreme Court, in other actions:

1. Agreed to decide whether union-management contracts can change the job security given veterans under the G. I. Bill of Rights.

2. Ruled, 5 to 4, that separate mailing of drugs and labels for use, at different times, is not an escape from Food and Drug Act bans on misbranding.

3. Declared unanimously that a person must not be "absolutely destitute" in filing a pauper's suit in the courts, but only unable to pay court costs and still maintain his normal needs.

Refuses to Review Decision

In the portal case, the court refused to review a decision which denied a retroactive claim to maintenance employes and others at the home office of Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, for overtime between April and December, 1940.

The company argued successfully in lower courts that the 1947 portal law barred the claims, inasmuch as it was the practice of the Federal Wage and Hour Division not to enforce the Fair Labor Standards Act in the insurance industry before 1942.

The portal law bans retroactive claims for such makeready activity as time spent sharpening tools, changing clothes or otherwise preparing for work. The Supreme Court upheld this portion of the act last week by refusing to review a decision denying such claims.

The decision yesterday supports another section of the law, which states that an employer is not liable for back claims where he can prove the "act or omission complained of was in good faith in conformity with and reliance on any administrative regulation, order, ruling . . ."

See Billions in Claims

Between 1946, when a Supreme Court decision appeared to clear the way for retroactive claims, and 1947, when the portal law outlawed them, some six billion dollars on claims were filed.

In the job security case, involving discharge of three former servicemen by the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. of Los Angeles, the GIs were "bumped" under seniority provision written into a contract while they were in service.

The lower courts upheld the GIs, holding the case did not involve superseniority which the Supreme Court ruled two years ago could not be extended to GIs. The union appealed, and the Government has entered the case saying it affects the job rights of 1948 Selective Service Law draftees as well as World War II veterans.

Justice William O. Douglas wrote the majority opinion in the drug labeling case. He said it was "wholly irrelevant" whether misstatements about a product were sent by a different mail; that it was necessary to extend the act to prevent a "wide loophole" for violations.

Justice Black, Frankfurter, Murphy and Jackson dissented.

The decision arose in two cases involving alleged violation of the law. The United States Court of Appeals at New Orleans had set aside the conviction of Fred Urbeteit, Tallahassee, Fla., accused of claiming falsely that his electric "sinuouthermic" machine was a cure for anything from hay fever to tuberculosis. Another court found Lelord Kordel guilty of misbranding drugs shipped from Chicago to Cincinnati by claiming in circulars mailed before the shipment that the drug held the "secret of rejuvenation."

Unanimous Decision

The court's assurance that poorer citizens need not become penniless in fighting lawsuits was given in a case involving the Federal District Court for the Northern District of Oklahoma.

The lower court had refused to let Mrs. Grace W. Adkins continue her suit for back pay claims of her deceased husband unless she guaranteed to pay court costs. It said she had failed to prove that she did not have sufficient funds.

The high court's unanimous decision, written by Justice Hugo L. Black, said:

"We cannot agree with the court below that one must be absolutely destitute to enjoy the benefits of the statute."

In another decision, the court ruled, 5 to 4, that the Grand Hydro Corp., an Oklahoma utility concern, is entitled to $800,000, plus $518,197 in interest, as "fair compensation" for land condemned in building the Grand River power project. The company had received only $136,250 for the property.

Youth Is Ordered Held for Action of Court In Death of Girl From Injuries in Crash

Twenty-year-old William B. King of 4319 44th st. nw., yesterday was held responsible for the death of an 18-year-old girl who was thrown from his convertible while he was taking her home from a party.

After about 50 minutes of deliberation, a six-man coroner's jury ordered King held for action of the criminal division of Municipal Court under the Negligent Homicide Act.

The victim, Miss Beverly Edwards, formerly of Bloomsburg, Pa., was hurtled from King's car when it went over a curb on Klingle st. nw., about 100 feet east of the Porter st. bridge, knocked over an electric light pole and careened back across the street onto a center island. She died shortly afterward of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Roommate Testifies

Miss Betty Jane Hill, 18-year-old roommate of Miss Edwards, at 4522 15th st. nw., also was thrown from the car. She testified that King called for the two girls about 10:30 p. m. November 13 at the drugstore where both of them worked behind the fountain.

They started for a party at the Roosevelt Hotel in his 1948 convertible Pontiac, she testified, stopping en route to drink some beers in the car. She said later the youth was her date and Miss Edwards was simply accompanying them to the party.

At the Roosevelt, Miss Hill testified, she had some "whisky in a cup." She said she "didn't see" King take any more to drink.

Carried Into Car

When the three left the hotel, she was carried into the car because "I guess I had too much to drink," she said. "When I woke up I was falling from the car—someone had hold of my arm and was pulling me . . ."

Officer W. B. Phares of the Accident Prevention Unit testified that the 70-pound lamppost which the convertible struck was "broken and demolished." A chunk of it "bounced up the street," he said, and "rolled 312 feet from where it was knocked off."

Precinct Detective Frederick Williams testified King told him after the accident that he was traveling 30 or 35 miles an hour when the smashup occurred. The spee limit in that area is 25 miles an hour.

King did not take the stand.

Anxious Moments at Inquest

AWAITING VERDICT—William B. King and Betty Jane Hill, one of his passengers, as they awaited the verdict of a coroner's jury after the inquest yesterday into the death of Miss Beverly Edwards, who was thrown from an automobile driven by King. King was ordered held for court action

Parked Midget Car Switched by Pranksters

Police sympathized with Mrs. Freda Berla when she said her automobile was lifted by pranksters from the right side of the street and placed on the left, for which she received a parking ticket.

Capt. Beverly Beach, Seventh Precinct, thought it was a plausible story since Mrs. Berla, who lives at 5009 Weaver ter. nw., has a Bantam car.

Her ticket was canceled, one of 113 traffic tickets "fixed" by police last week.

Six persons had parking tickets canceled because of diplomatic immunity. With their violations, they are:

Jacqueline BrindAmour, French Finance Counsel's office, parking in bus stop; Thomas W. Arnold, Indian Embassy, no parking at any time; N. S. Icarangal, Philippine Embassy, parking less than 25 feet from stop sign; Robert Vaes, Belgian Embassy, parking less than 40 feet from an intersection; Alexander Ivonov, Russian Embassy, standing in zone marked no standing 7 a. m. to 9:30 a. m., and John P. Andres, Honduran Embassy, parking in zone marked no parking 7 a. m. to 6:30 p. m.

Happy Moron Holds Own as Auto Driver

By Arthur Edson
Associated Press Reporter

The next time some driver roughs you up in traffic, shout at him (or her):

"Aw, your old lady has a high I. Q.!"

For the consensus is that—so far as good driving is concerned—it's as bad to be too smart as it is to be too dumb.

This all started with Dr. Winfred Overholser, one of the Nation's top psychiatrists and head of St. Elizabeths Hospital here.

Morons Good Drivers

Dr. Overholser was making a speech to examiners for drivers' licenses. Someone made a crack about morons, whereupon Dr. Overholser replied:

"Why, morons make good drivers."

"The thing most people forget," explained Dr. Overholser, "is that to be a good driver you need emotional stability. And that has nothing to do with intelligence."

Dr. Overholser didn't say whether he would go as far as James Stannard Baker, research director of the Northwestern University Traffic Institute.

Other Conclusions

Baker recently complained that intellectuals can't keep their minds on their driving. His conclusion:

"A high grade moron makes the best automobile driver."

One more authority, and we'll rest the case.

The Automobile Association of America has in its files a report by Dr. A. R. Lauer of Iowa State College.

Dr. Lauer's tentative conclusion:

The poorest drivers are the hopeless morons and those with the highest intelligence. The best drivers are somewhere in between.

Anglo-American Exchange Teacher Program Hailed

Exchange teachers are the "unofficial ambassadors" who carry international understanding to small communities, a group of students were told yesterday by the directors of the exchange program in England and the United States.

Miss Edith Ford, director of teacher exchange for the British government, and Dr. Paul Smith of the United States Office of Education, spoke at Wilson Teachers College at an informal social gathering of the schools Committee for Intercultural and International Understanding and student attending the State Department's Orientation Center located at the school.

Miss Ford said the 312 British teachers participating in the exchange program have delivered more than 1200 speeches to small civic groups in this country during the last two years. Dr. Smith said the teachers are doing "a great job" in small communities never visited by ambassadors or other foreign officials.

Watkins Gives Talk On Mobilization Plans

The Columbia University Club of Washington last night heard Ralph Watkins, coordinator of plans and programs of the National Security Resources Board, speak on mobilization of the country's resources in the event of an emergency.

Watkins told the group, which met at the Continental Hotel in its regular monthly session, that the NSRB has drafted legislation to submit to Congress to speed mobilization should the need arise.

Meeting Set Tonight On Dissolving HSA

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Hospital administrators and representatives of the Hospital Service Agency are scheduled to meet in closed session tonight with Community Chest leaders on the recent proposal to dissolve HSA.

The meeting, first of what promises to be a series of conferences, was asked yesterday by Chester Morrill, lawyer and civic leader. It is scheduled to start at 7:30 p. m. at Hotel Washington.

The purpose of the meeting, he said, is "to explore the controversy recently aired in public print."

Last week, Robert Bryant, executive secretary of the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area, issued a public statement that the council had "approved in principle" a proposal of its members to abandon HSA, which arranges hosppitalization of patients needing Community Chest financing help.

Bryant's statement was issued, it was learned, after complaint by HSA heads to the Community Chest Federation that "some" of the area hospitals were setting up their own screening services for admitting semi-ingidents, and were ignoring HSA certifications.

Scheduled to attend tonight's meeting are:

Edward J. Keyes, director of the Community Chest Federation, and Morrill, who heads the Federation's hospitalization fund committee; Dr. John A. Reed, president; Dr. Henry C. McAtee, past president, and Willard Smith, administrator, representing HSA; and James Capossela, administrator of Emergency Hospital, and Bryant, representing the Hospital Council.

Earlier yesterday, it was learned, Bryant met with hospital representatives to map plans to fight any attempt to prolong settlement.

Keyes, whose organization supplies the bulk of funds for hospital care of persons not eligible for District help, but still unable to pay hospital costs, urged "caution and deliberation."

"This is not as simple a problem as it may appear," he declared. "The hospitals are plagued with financial problems, but the matter is just as much a community concern as theirs."

Under present operations, the Community Chest allocates the hospitalization fund which is administered by HSA. The agency, formerly Health Security Administration, screens applicants for hospital care, certifies those eligible and pays the hospitals at the rate of $7.50 an adult patient day. It then arranges partial repayment on the basis of the patient's means, with collections over operating costs returned to the hospitalization fund.

Rev. D. W. Betts on Air

The Rev. Darby Wood Betts, rector of St. Clement's Episcopal Church, Alexandria, will appear on "We, the People" over WTOP at 9 p. m. today. He is rector of what has been described as the most modern church in the United States. The recently completed building has no windows, and the altar is in the center of the sanctuary.

Of Anemia Victims

Liver Extract Held Saving 100,000 Lives

More than 100,000 persons in the United States are living today who would have died from pernicious anemia without liver extract therapy, according to Metropolitan Life Insurance statisticians.

The treatment, introduced in 1926, has proved so effective, they say, that patients now diagnosed as victims of the ailment can continue their usual pursuits and live long enough to die from other cause.

Final Chest Luncheon Set Wednesday

The Community Chest campaign will hold a final report luncheon Wednesday at 12:15 p. m. in the Washington Hotel to tally results in its current campaign for $4,566,790.

Solicitation will continue until December 3, however, according to Chauncey G. Parker, campaign chairman. Pledges for 71 per cent of the goal have been turned in so far.

Thirty-three awards for outstanding service during the campaign will be presented at the luncheon, to which executives of the Chest and the 104 Red Feather agencies it serves, have been invited.

Parker asked each of about 100,000 working persons who have not yet given to the Chest to "mail in a check for as large an amount as his conscience dictates." He pointed out that if these gifts average just $10, the Chest will realize another million dollars.

Executive Committee Is Elected

The Health and Hospital Section of United Community Services, representing both Chest-supported and non-Chest hospitals and health agencies in the District, elected a 12-man executive committee yesterday at a meeting in the Sheraton Hotel.

The group, whose membership includes 125 representatives of public and private health institutions, also voted to admit a slate of 24 members-at-large representing the community.

United Community Services is a new body replacing both the old Washington Community Chest unit and the former Council of Social Agencies. It embraces a Recreation section and a Family Welfare Section as well as the Health and Hospitals unit.

Newly elected members of the health unit's executive committee are: Miss Gertrude Bowling, director of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society; Miss Lois Burman, nutritionist for the District Health Department's Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare; Dr. John W. Cronin, chief of the Federal Employes Health Division for the U. S. Public Health Service; Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the District Social Hygiene Society; Dr. Leigh C. Fairbank, former chief of the U. S. Army Dental Corps; Dr. Dorothy Ferebee, connected with Freedmen's Hospital and Howard University Medical School.

Mrs. Grace Parr, medical social worker for the American National Red Cross; Leo Schmelzer, superintendent of George Washington University Hospital; Mrs. William Carter Bowles, formerly active in the Montgomery County Public Health Lay Council; Rick J. LaFalce, public relations man; Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of District public schools for Divisions 10-13, and Franklin H. Armed Forces' Medical Unity Lag Attacked

Lack of progress in unifying medical services of the armed forces was criticized here yesterday at the annual meeting of the Society of United States Medical Consultants in World War II, at the Army Medical Center.

Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, Army Surgeon General, told the critics in a speech he was not disappointed with the work of the unification committee "considering the infinitestimal degree of coordination and integration that existed a year ago."

He said the committee, headed by Dr. Paul R. Hawley, former medical service director of the Veterans' Administration, has made 15 proposals for major changes. Of these, he said, 3 already have been approved by Defense Secretary Forrestal.

Another speaker, Col. Earle Standlee, special assistant to the Surgeon General, told the protesting members that unification success hinges on abandonment of "that old competitive ideology, pride of place and desire for preeminence."

Policeman Given Year for Thefts In Baltimore

Baltimore, Nov. 22 (AP).—Earl Lichtenberg, 50-year-old police sergeant, was sentenced to a year in prison today for stealing building materials.

His punishment does not stop there.

He loses his policeman's pension, built up through 25 years on the force and worth about $45,000.

Defense attorneys pointed this out when Lichtenberg came up before Judge Herman M. Moser for sentence after he was convicted of taking 16 bundles of rock lath and 21 doors from a housing project. His father was a part-time night watchman there.

Arlington Man Indicted In Slaying

Warrenton, Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—A Fauquier County grand jury today indicted James T. Nolan, Arlington cleaner, on a charge of murder in the death of Belmont Woodridge, also of Arlington, whose bullet-riddled body was found in a wooded area near here November 17.

Nolan, 25, also was indicted on a charge of stealing Woodridge's automobile.

He told the court he lacked funds for his defense. The court appointed William H. Gaines and Upton H. Richards, local attorneys, as his counsel. Gaines and Richards indicated it would be "two or three days" before a plea was entered.

No date was set for trial.

Woodridge was shot about November 11. He had been missing since that date when, according to police, Nolan led them to Woodridge's body last Wednesday in a woods just off Route 690 about 3½ miles north of Warrenton.

Police said Woodridge had been shot five times with a .32-caliber gun.

Nolan was arrested in Romney, W. Va., for possession of Woodridge's 1947-model automobile, after an alarm for the vehicle had been sent out. He was subsequently returned to Warrenton to face trial.

Man Held in Sex Case

Edmond Wilson, 42, of 908 K st. nw., was ordered held under $2000 bond for grand jury action yesterday on a charge of giving a 10-year-old boy $2 in persuading him to commit an indecent act.

British Leader Has One Word for Critics: 'Truman'

Dunfermline, Scotland, Nov. 21 (AP).—Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison has a one-word answer for Conservative newspapers which say the British public opposes the Labor government's steel nationalization bill.

The word is "Truman."

Conservative newspapers, Morrison said in a speech to a district Labor rally today, "are dogmatically asserting that the overwhelming majority of the people are opposed to the (steel) bill. For this they have little or no evidence."

"My answer to all these sweeping claims as to what the public thinks is one word—Truman.

"We had our own election result in 1945 which upset all Conservative calculations. And now the United States has had an even more dramatic indication that the prognostications of the press of the right are unreliable."

Writing On The Wall

The withdrawal of the United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers from the much denounced United Public Workers makes good sense from the standpoint of the local union membership. The cafeteria workers came out decidedly second best in their strike last winter against Government Services, Inc., and are now working without a contract. One of the principal issues in that strike was the refusal of union leaders to sign anti-Communist affidavits under the Taft-Hartley law. The tactics of GSI were not wholly commendable on this score, since the affidavits were not necessary for bargaining—but the fact remains that GSI won the strike.

A change within the cafeteria workers' local has brought new officers willing to sign the affidavits. However, the top leadership of the parent United Public Workers has continued to refuse, and the appearance of the UPW president before Congress left little doubt as to where his ideological sympathies lie. The stigma of a Communist-dominated parent union would have been a great handicap to the cafeteria local in future negotiations with GSI and probably would have worked hardship on the members. As it is now, there is reason to hope that new talks with GSI will be concluded amicably.

The rout of Communist leadership in this instance parallels what has been done in New York, where the national CIO has revoked the charter of the Greater New York CIO Council. Self-police within the labor movement is the most effective antidote to Communist infiltration—far more effective, for example, than mere affidavits which permit undercover Communist direction. Both the CIO and AFL have shown an increasing awareness of the necessity to clean house, for their own protection as well as at public demand. It is in many ways regrettable that the same process could not be applied to the United Public Workers. Repeated efforts at internal reform have failed, however, and with the leftwing leadership still entrenched, the reformers appear to be concluding that the only recourse is to abandon ship.

Partisan "Experts"

"We'll try to find some Democratic experts," said Senator McGrath, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, when asked what would happen to the congressional committee's professional staffs when the Eighty-first Congress assembles in January. His remark could be interpreted as meaning either that the new Democratic majorities in the House and Senate intend to repeal a portion of the Congressional Reorganization Act, which a Democratic Congress passed in 1946, or that the law will be openly flouted. In either event, it reflects a reactionary attitude that seems strangely out of harmony with the results of the election.

Congress wrote into the law the authorization for its standing committees to select up to four professional staff members. These experts must be chosen "on a permanent basis without regard to political affiliation and solely on the basis of fitness to perform the duties of the office." In some instances the committee chairmen of the Eightieth Congress undoubtedly gave these expert jobs to political hacks. Such incompetents ought to be replaced as new experts well qualified by training and experience are found. But many other staff members named by Republican chairmen are well qualified for the work they are doing, and they cannot be thrown out for partisan reasons without subverting the act which both parties and a large segment of public opinion have supported.

It is a misnomer to speak of "Democratic" or "Republican" experts. Experts go without party labels. If they are to do the work contemplated by the men who drew up the Congressional Reorganization Act, their politics will have to remain wholly in the background. Even if these jobs should be refilled by Democratic appointees of the highest caliber, a general change-over would still be a great disservice to the public. For it would set a pattern for sweeping out the incumbents every time control of Congress shifts from one party to the other. The highest caliber of experts cannot be hired under such conditions. In other words, Mr. McGrath's scheme means reduction of professional staff jobs to spoils. We do not see how Congress as a body can permit such perversion of this reform without breaking faith with the people.

Chinese Vortex

Basic to any appreciation of the chaos in China is that a rebellion against Chiang Kai-shek is in progress—led by many other elements in addition to the Communists. The Communists are merely exploiting it. This they are doing successfully, though not so much because they are strong as because the Nationalists are weak. It was only a few months ago that the Communists felt they had enough administrative ability to take over and run a city. They chose Tsinan, capital of Shantung Province, and it would almost seem as if it was this decision that precipitated the Nationalist panic. At any rate, seven out of the nine Nationalist divisions in Manchuria gave up without firing a shot, either surrendering or running away, and in both cases the Communists came into possession of arms and equipment, mainly American. In the operations in North China the Nationalist panic put the Communists on the road to Nanking almost automatically. Now there is a pause—whether because of Nationalist opposition or of Communist over-extension, nobody knows—and this will do more than give Chiang Kai-shek a breathing spell; it will enable the United States to overhaul its own policy.

Only a blind man could fail to see that the old policy is thoroughly bankrupt—the policy of thinking of China only in terms of Chiang Kai-shek, of supporting him with aid and arms in his struggle to keep a non-existent power. There should be a clean break with the past. Our policy hitherto has helped the Communists more than their own strength has, for it has amassed for them American arms, Chinese sympathy, and a standpat attitude on the part of the stubborn Chiang Kai-shek himself which has been his own undoing. The Generalissimo is now calling for help, and inspired news from Nanking is already anticipating its arrival. Doubtless Chiang Kai-shek in his communication to Mr. Truman promised full powers for any high-ranking American that the President might dispatch. But that has already been tried. First in such a role was General Stilwell, and, as his book testified, he quickly realized the hopelessness of trying to save China through Chiang Kai-shek. The same experience befell General Marshall. General Wedemeyer was the last emissary, and though the public is kept (scandalously) in the dark about his report, it would be curious if he had not repeated the lecture which, on his departure, he gave to Chiang Kai-shek on the need for a house-cleaning. Such a house-cleaning has never been accomplished. There have been some superficial changes, it is true, but back of the facade the corruption has remained, and it has now festered into the present condition of near-collapse.

It was because of the alarming facility with which the Nationalist divisions turn into American arms-carriers for the Communists that we suggested that our obligated aid should be sent to Fu-Tso-yi and other generals nominally loyal to Chiang Kai-shek who have shown themselves capable of using it. But the obligation was with Chiang, and to him, apparently, the remaining aid has been consigned. It is now opportune to revamp our American policy so as to relieve ourselves of Chiang Kai-shek's coattails. A new policy should be based squarely on the American interest in the Far East. That is, first and foremost, the protection of American lives and property in key ports of the Chinese littoral. Such a service the Marines have done for more than a century in places where organized government has disintegrated. We would go further and establish these and other centers of security in the Far East in concert with the members of the embryonic Atlantic Pact, for these powers happen to comprise those Western powers with interests in the Far East. A common interest is now at stake, and requires to be safeguarded, but that interest does not extend to entanglement in the Chinese morass.

It will take the Chinese a long time to work out their own salvation, but only the Chinese can do it. Those who fear a quick organization of China under Communist auspices know the dimensions neither of the problem nor of the country. It is this fear that is putting a premium on panic counsels of aid to Chiang on the Greek model. The security and the resources of this country would be frittered away by indulging in such a program. Noninvolvement in China is imposed upon our policy-makers—and should be so declared—by the strategy of Russo-Western conflict. Strategy would go out the window if we allowed ourselves to be dragged into an anti-Communist crusade wherever there was a Communist irruption.

Lo, The Two Indians

Sirdar J. J. Singh, president of the India League of America, has a problem. Or rather he has taken up a problem of long standing and voiced a plaintive hope that at last some useful solution can be found. The trouble—and it has bothered us, too, from time to time—is that ever since Columbus failed to recognize the New World when he saw it, the original inhabitants of these continents, and their descendants have borne the same name as the inhabitants of India.

Sirdar Singh, like many a predecessor, wishes there were two distinct words. We share his thought that a lot of confusion and perhaps some embarrassment could be avoided that way. But we fear the search is fruitless. For it's not just a matter of coining a new word. The anthropologists have already done that. But getting people used to saying "Amerinds" is quite another matter. At any rate, we haven't heard any latter-day Dan'l Boones proclaiming triumphantly that "Another Amerind bit the dust!" Nor do we, as a matter of fact, take too kindly to the idea of calling our favorite season of the year "Amerindian summer." And we suspect no Hoosier would ever consent to live in the sovereign State of Amerindiana.

Not only have we in this country taken the Indians (the Amerinds, that is) for everything they had, but we have taken them into our hearts. They are too much a part of our tradition, and too much a part of reality in many parts of Latin America, to go as well under any other name. And it seems highly unlikely that the Indians (of India, that is) will volunteer to change their own terminology. So it looks, Mr. Singh, as though all of us, perhaps in Indian file, will have to trudge along with this pleasant confusion for a while yet.

What Is News?

Some of the post-election criticisms of the press are salutary, but not all of them. Take, for instance, a Sunday broadcast of Mr. Morris Ernst, that perpetual illuminator of journalistic shortcomings. Mr. Ernst, by way of example, chided newspapers for ignoring recent monopoly hearings. Mr. Ernst strongly implied that he considered these hearings the most significant news of the time. History may or may not vindicate his judgment. Meanwhile, however, Mr. Ernst is censuring the press for an alleged failure to use his yardstick, as if his yardstick was historically true.

There are many factors which influence the decision as to what events are covered and what news appears in the papers. Mr. Ernst is unquestionably right in asserting that competitive pressures often encourage the sensational at the expense of the more significant. Undoubtedly Mr. Ernst also can point to instances in which protests from individuals or groups have affected decisions on what to print. But all this begs the question. There is no objective standard for determining what is news any more than there is such a thing as objective truth. Facts appear to be facts only because a majority of the people accepts them as such.

In the last analysis, then, the failings of the press are mainly human failings. In deciding what news to print out of the bales of it that are reported, editors attempt to guess not only at what their readers want to read, but also at what news is of ultimate significance. Once such decisions are reached, the news that appears still depends on the eyes, ears and interest of the reporters, the judgment of copyreaders, available space, and a host of other mechanical exigencies. From its inception until it appears in print, printed news is a subjective affair in this news-crowded world.

Counterblockade

One of the recommendations advanced in Cincinnati by the AFL's committee on international labor relations suggests that the committee has ventured beyond its depth. Its proposal that the democratic nations jointly sever trade relations with the Soviet Union until Moscow lifts the Berlin blockade seems quite out of proportion to the problem at hand and of dubious worth on several counts.

A narrow economic interpretation of national interest would condemn the measure at once on the ground that the United States gets the better value out of current trade with Russia. Our exports to the Soviet Union have fallen to almost nothing in recent months. On the other hand, imports have continued on an upward trend during the first nine months of 1948. In September, the latest month for which figures are available, we received from Russia 98 times the value of goods we shipped there. The figures, in millions of dollars, are as follows:

	Jan.-Mar. Average.	Apr.-June Average.	July	Aug.	Sept.
Imports ...	4.8	7.2	5.7	8.5	9.8
Exports ...	6.9	1.4	0.4	1.2	0.1

Among the goods we import from Russia, furs are the leading item—and perhaps we could get along without them. Next, however, come manganese and chrome ores. These are strategic minerals in which the United States is short and which we are stockpiling against future emergency need. A severance of trade would serve us ill on this score. Exports of machinery, the leading commodity sent to Russia, have been almost zero since April. The largest single item in August was "household and personal effects," presumably the possessions of departing Russian consular personnel. The AFL is helping our foreign policy a great deal, but not with this suggestion.

BELL BUOY

Poised for an instant on the churning crest
Half over on its iron side it hangs,
Then plunges through the boiling surf, and clangs
Its brazen note of desolate unrest.

With pounding boom and blow, the sea's cold rush
Has clambered up its black and sleety side
Only to feel the bell buoy, swinging, glide
Down through the greening depths where waters hush.

The sea is blank, with heavy rolling swell,
And blank and tenantless the lonely skies
Save for the cold-eyed birds with raucous cries—
Only the gulls have heard that warning knell!

Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

Military Censorship

Your November 17 editorial, "Sicilian Incident," on military censorship is well taken. Indeed the military should realize that "the best public relations policy is to let the people know of its (the military's) mistakes as well as its achievements." It is not only good public relations, it is essential to democracy. We people can not judge rightly from half-truths or carefully strained facts. If the services have botched a job or if a general has blown his top, the military's duty is to tell us. They must understand that it is we who employ them, and not they who employ us.

For this reason, concerning Marquis Childs' November 17 column entitled "The War Through Many Eyes," Secretary Forrestal must be constrained from placing the Navy and Air Force officers' memoirs under his censor's scissors. Likewise, the Army must be made to lift its censorship rule on such publications and allow those who know to tell those who ought to know.

Korean Policy

Yongjeung Kim, president of the Korean Affairs Institute, has for many months been bombarding the American public with letters to the editor—such as the one published in The Washington Post on November 13.

Mr. Kim's major points of attack are almost identical with the official line of the Communist puppet government in the Soviet occupation zone of Korea. Mr. Kim, who has been a guest in the United States since 1922, pits his own opinion of Korean affairs against the unanimous judgment of our armed forces and the State Department.

Mr. Kim would have us believe that the government of President Syngman Rhee has been installed in power by the devious machinations of the American occupation authorities and that the people of Korea "have no confidence in the existing leadership." The present government of Korea was chosen in free elections on May 10, 1948. The elections were held at the suggestion of the United Nations Assembly (by a vote of 43 to 0) under the supervision of the United States occupation authorities. As a double safeguard the elections were closely observed by the UN Temporary Commission on Korea.

The results of the voting were an overwhelming victory for President Rhee and his party. In fact, the total vote for Dr. Rhee in the American occupation zone was so great that he had a majority of the total Korean nation, including that section which is locked within the Soviet occupation zone and was not permitted to vote. It is a little difficult to see the validity of Mr. Kim's argument that such a government is not representative.

Furthermore, Mr. Kim implies that the recent revolt in Korea was a people's uprising resulting from "half-hearted half measures" taken by the American occupation authorities as well as the unpopularity of the Rhee government. Again, it is only necessary to point out that the Government of the United States has unequivocally branded the uprising as a Communist rebellion, planned and guided by the Soviets.

To clinch his arguments, Mr. Kim launches a violent diatribe against the caliber of the American personnel assigned to Korea. He described the "responsible American personnel" in Korea—including presumably General Hodge—as "mediocrities." He lays equal blame upon the Americans for the present division of Korea into two warring occupation zones which has resulted from the refusal of the Soviet Union to engage in any join operation to establish a free government. Mr. Kim urges the United States to "hasten to assign representatives of the highest integrity and ability to Korea."

New Party

Referring to your issue of November 17, the Alsop brothers' column portrays Taft the last of the Republicans, and intimates that the party of the old guard, the party of exorbitant profits from the general public, the party of to-heck-with-the-people—will pass away. Not too many will disagree. But if "Le roi est mort!", what political party will fill the vacuum? We must not be left with only one party. The Republican Party has some patriotic, fairminded members, who are assets to any new party and to the Nation. I have in mind Statesman Vandenberg, former isolationist, who was big enough to admit his mistake, and who now puts his country above his party; nor could Morse of Oregon or Baldwin of Connecticut be spared very well—nor could the party be spared.

As a lifelong Democrat, I would consider it unfortunate should not the Republican Party be reorganized, as an "honorable opposition" party, as our English friends would say. The old name might awaken unfortunate memories; nor would the name "Progressive" do, for Wallace and his fellow-travelers have left it in disrepute. How would "New Conservative Party" or "Liberal Business Party" do? But at all events the Democratic Party should have opposition, in the next Congress, if not in this one. A single political party in the Government of any country smacks too much of Hitlerism or of the Kremlin, and is bad for the people. Let us have the formation of an honestly liberal and fair political party, one which will combat extremes and extravagances of all kinds.

H. L. GUEYDAN,
Washington.

Poverty And Plenty

In your November 13 editorial "News From Germany," you state that conditions which permit of lavish consumption by a favored few are not conducive to inculcating a love for democratic institutions and their American expounders.

The thoughtful person will realize that such conditions are all too characteristic of life in the United States. Those of us who come in daily contact with Americans whose diet is not only monotonous but lacking in sufficient nutritive value, cannot help but feel that such conditions are fertile soil for ideas and attitudes so disturbing to the complacent and conservative.

The outlook for dependent children and the aged is indeed dim with inadequate public relief allowances and private contributions to the Community Chest lagging behind. Bitter deprivation in the midst of display of luxury will be a more and more familiar picture this winter here at home. Where are our hearts and discriminating intelligence that we can let matters come to such a pass?

Washington. M. S.

"Church And State"

In your November 17 editorial "Church and State" you say that you have often pointed out the need for more faith, and more religious instruction, but that you disapprove of released time for public school children for that purpose.

By this stand are you not rejecting the most practical method of giving increased religious instruction to children because of imaginary threats to the separation of church and state?

It is admittedly difficult to get tired and restless children together out of school hours and teach them anything, and without released time many of them will have only the instruction they get at Sunday school.

It is hard to see how a system which encourages children to give one hour to God on Sunday, and the rest of the week to their secular studies, and to amusing themselves, can bring the increase of faith that you advocate.

DOROTHEA SONTAG.
Washington.

"Bundle From Britain"

I have read your November 16 editorial about the Rev. Hewlett Johnson's recent talks. This man comes to our shores pleading for understanding between two great peoples.

Let us teach the Russian people by example and not by precepts. When discrimination of race and creed is abolished, when illiteracy is destroyed in our land, when the science of humanity shall have caught up with science itself, when our weapons shall be turned to making books and ploughshares, then the Russian people may desire to accept our way of life as the better one.

But when we build up the Ruhr into an arsenal against them, when we support the governments that are corrupted like Greece and China in the name of democracy, when we turn with alarm at the mention of an ambassador of good will to break down the wall of suspicion and hatred and when we question a man of high integrity who sees the handwriting on the wall and feels these two great peoples need not destroy each other but learn from each other and build one world through a United Nations, then I feel that we are truly preparing for World War III. HOUSEWIFE.
Harrisonburg, Va.

Target Ships

I see by your November 12 columns that another of our ships has been sunk for target practice—this time the USS Pensacola.

Just how long is this sort of thing going to continue? Cruisers, destroyers, battleships and submarines—each costing a mint of taxpayers' money and containing thousands of tons of steel, copper and brass, materials which are sky-high in price, in short supply and vitally needed in our everyday economy.

Soon these same be-braided wonder boys will cry a scarcity of ships and shout loudly for more money to build them. What for? To provide targets for their guns?

Yes, I know the weak story about the Bikini "hot" ships. An absurd excuse for sending them to the bottom of the sea, for it is common knowledge that such radio activity dissipates itself in time. But I suppose it would be impracticable to moor these ships for a while until they were safe to be scrapped. It is so much simpler to use them as million-dollar targets and provide a Roman holiday for our Navy. And who cares to conserve our fast-disappearing natural resources?

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

After Taft-Hartley

RETURNING to Washington from his Florida vacation, President Truman will discover in the dock workers' strike a sample of the troubles he is likely to face during the coming four years. Foreign aid, inflation, campaign promises, all are tied together in the crippling strike on the East and West coasts that has already held up nearly 200,000 tons of Marshall Plan aid.

At the same time the two big trade union associations, AFL and CIO, in annual convention are calling for outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act. William Green of the AFL has gone further to demand that the Hobbs Anti-Racketeering Act and the Lea Act, aimed at featherbedding in the radio industry, be stricken off.

To officials responsible for administering collective bargaining laws, these sweeping demands have a fearsome sound. Should the Congress go the whole way, administration would be left in a defenseless position.

Responsible unions that helped create the "Truman mandate" might not abuse their privileges under the old Wagner Act. But unions still dominated by Communists, and there are some, would like nothing better than to embarrass the Administration.

If winter comes, can John L. Lewis be far behind, to paraphrase a much quoted line from Keats? Reports are that Lewis, who once again demonstrated that his political huffing and puffing has no effect whatsoever, is spoiling for a chance to upend his old enemy, the President. A nice, long coal strike, free of Taft-Hartley restraints, would do it.

NOR HAS the President forgotten his painful dilemma when the railroad strike of two years ago threatened to bring the Nation to a standstill. On that occasion the President went before Congress to ask the right to draft striking railway workers into the Army under wartime powers.

Responsible officials who must deal with labor are talking about a compromise which would combine about a fourth of the Taft-Hartley Act with three fourths of the old Wagner Act. As they see it, the Taft-Hartley provisions barring jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts would be kept.

President Truman is on record in a State of the Union message favoring such restraints. And while the spokesmen for organized labor would make a loud squawk, they might in reality be not too unwilling to take these provisions, since the jurisdictional strike was a headache for trade union bosses.

In addition, there would be retained some means of bringing to a halt strikes threatening services vital to the security of the Nation. Here, of course, the opposition of organized labor would be loud and real.

WHAT LABOR officials fear most is a three or four month interval following outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act when there would be nothing in its place. Just now some of the tougher Taft-Hartley decisions are beginning to come down from the National Labor Relations Board. In the limbo left by repeal, something like chaos is possible with no decisions of the board having any effect.

On the inflation front the battle line seems to be clearly drawn. Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers has promised a fourth round of wage increases. He has said that this must not mean an increase in the price of cars.

Here, of course, is Mr. Truman's stickiest problem. He might persuade Congress to mop up excess profits, which Senator Ralph Flanders of Vermont points to as amazing and fantastic, with an excess profits tax. But whether it is possible to get workable price control that would cover automobiles seems highly doubtful.

Even before Reuther spoke, Henry Ford 2d said that a fourth round of wage increases would mean a fourth round of price rises. In the interview in which he made this statement, Ford seemed to imply that all this could lead only to another depression. He avoided saying that, but it could be read between the lines.

This, it so happens, is part of the rationalization of prominent Republicans in the aftermath of defeat. A depression, they are saying, is almost inevitable and it would have been so even if Governor Dewey had been elected. It will be known as the Truman depression. The New Deal remedies the President recommended in his campaign will be discredited and the Democrats will be out of power after 1952 for 20 years. Now that he is in harness again even the triumphant President must see in the dock strike an unhappy portent.

Merchant Marine Draft

I was very much interested in your November 15 picture spread about "Recruit Robert E. Bell." The line which most interested me is the credit "a third mate in the wartime Merchant Marine." To me this small phrase indicates a sad and sordid story of the treatment accorded the men who delivered the goods through the gauntlet of subs, etc., in the late war.

Personally, I don't know Robert Bell but I will venture a supposition that he saw far more of the shooting war than 90 per cent of the deferred veterans who are not being drafted.

Latin Cooperation

By Sumner Welles

Truman Urged To Restore FDR Policy

THERE ARE indications in Washington that we may see a return to the hemisphere policy of the Roosevelt Administration.

The Peruvian revolution affords new evidence of the disintegration that has been going on since 1945 in the political and social stability of the Americas.

The good neighbor policy in its first stage concentrated on the removal of distrust. It abolished all forms of United States interference. It brought about the conclusion of a series of inter-American treaties of which the most important was that which pledged nonintervention. It ended hostility to the United State and laid the ground for a regional system based on confidence and a recognition of common interest.

With the approach of the second world war the emphasis turned to continental unity as a prerequisite to continental security.

But from the outset the Roosevelt Administration stressed the need for economic cooperation with the other American republics.

THE isolationists who have been clamoring that this policy has made an Uncle Sap out of Uncle Sam have to some extent succeeded in obscuring the concrete advantages the United States has obtained.

The program of cooperation of the Roosevelt Administration was premised on the conviction that social progress and political stability in the hemisphere were contingent upon higher living standards, and that the growth of true democracy was also contingent upon better nutrition, sanitation, education and communications. It was believed that the measures of financial and economic cooperation that were undertaken would not only increase the probability of political and military security, but also provide a greater demand and increased purchasing power to United States exports.

The deplorable lack of consistency in American foreign policy was again emphasized when, notwithstanding the demonstrated value of the good neighbor policy, its essential features were discarded as soon as the war ended.

During the Byrnes regime in the State Department the United States flagrantly disregarded its pledge of nonintervention by interfering in Argentina's internal concerns. During the Marshall regime the United States ended for all practical purposes, its policy of financial and economic cooperation with the other American republics; ignored them when the European Recovery Program was set up; blocked the establishment of an inter-American bank; and made no effort to secure for Latin America assistance from the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund.

WE ARE now reaping the consequences. The Latin-American republics have no confidence that the good neighbor policy is a lasting policy. The feeling has grown that the United States is ready to ask them for cooperation when it requires their support, but is unwilling to offer its own cooperation when they need its help.

The termination of economic cooperation has contributed to inflation, commercial stagnation, widespread depression and unemployment, and these in turn have paved the way for political and social upheavals.

During the last few months there have been political uprisings in Colombia, a revolution in Costa Rica, dangerous unrest in Central America, a series of abortive revolts in Panama, Paraguay and Bolivia, a continuing state of political and social disturbance in Chile, and finally, the recent revolution in Peru.

The junta installed in Lima by General Odria, after the expulsion of the constitutional and democratic President, Dr. Bustamante, has all the earmarks of the military dictatorships which have so often proved themselves the bane of the Peruvian people. It has thrown the labor leaders in jail. It has outlawed the Apra, a party which is neither Fascist nor Communist, and which, with all of its mistakes, has unquestionably tried to better the lot of the underprivileged, and particularly that of the Indian population. The Odria regime has embarked upon an all too familiar campaign of repression. For the time being democracy in Peru has been stifled.

THERE is no doubt that Communist agents are increasingly busy in Latin America. But the reason for their success, and for the rapid growth of communism in many parts of the hemisphere, is the mounting economic distress which has hit first those elements in the population among whom communism can most readily make headway. There is no reason to expect any improvement in these conditions until the hemisphere returns to a program of inter-American economic cooperation.

The complexion of the new Congress is one reason for anticipating a change for the better. In the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the new chairman, Senator Connally, is, like Senator Vandenberg, a stanch supporter of the good neighbor policy. Many of the committee chairmanships in both houses will now be filled with men who recognize the need for a return to the policy of the Roosevelt Administration.

But unless President Truman sees to it that the State Department acts promptly, we may expect developments in the Americas that will be far more serious in their consequences than those which have already taken place.

German Scrap Iron Proposal Is Abandoned

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer announced last night the abandonment of a plan for the American scrap industry to set up a special corporation to buy and import all German scrap iron and steel destined for this country.

The plan called for the Commerce Department to direct the distribution among American iron and steel mills of all German scrap brought here by the proposed company. This rationing was to have been "on the basis of need."

Sawyer indicated the scheme may be revived later if the new Congress convening in January removes "legal and other uncertainties" which he said had caused the plan to be dropped for the time being. Which he said had caused the plan to be dropped for the time being.

The Commerce chief said these "uncertainties" included:

1. "Whether the U. S. military government in Germany could participate in certain phases." The scheme called for the military government to set the selling price of scrap and to give the proposed corporation the sole right to buy from Germans for U. S. use.

2. Whether the "voluntary scrap allocation" angle of the would run afoul of a ban against price fixing. This ban was included in a Congressional act passed last year to give anti-trust immunity to firms taking part in government-sponsored "voluntary" allocation programs.

Sawyer, who denied last week that scrap imports from Germany would prevent capacity operation of European steel mills, said the Commerce Department will continue to make "every effort to improve our domestic scrap situation."

Bradley Book Tells Bikini Ray Secrets

New York, Nov. 22.—Some of the secrets of Bikini—deadly radioactivity on the ships' decks, in their rigging, in the water, in the rocks, on the sand, in the air and even tramped about by men's boots—are told by Dr. David Bradley, one of the scientists.

Dr. Bradley was a Manhattan District atomic bomb worker, and at Bikini was one of the radioactive safety men. His job was to fly or walk into dangerous places with a Geiger counter to see how many rays were filling the air.

"No Place to Hide," the title of the book published today in which he tells this (Little Brown), s his idea of what the world may face if it fights atomic bomb wars.

Removed by Sandblasting

One of the secrets is that the Navy found a way to decontaminate ship decks of the deadly radioactivity after the underwater bomb explosion.

Sandblasting removed the rays—provided the blast got all the paint.

"You can't sandblast Pearl Harbor," Dr. Bradley says, "or Bremerton shipyards or Chicago."

Where wooden decks were radioactive the Navy learned that an ordinary carpenter's plane, cutting off a little less than a quarter of an inch of wood, also removes all the rays.

The Navy learned, too, that all kinds of washing serves only to drive the deadly atoms deeper into wood.

Dr. Bradley predicted that plastic paint, that can be stripped off the ship and thrown overboard in sheets, might be a protection.

Since he made this prediction, such paint has been used in laboratories of the Atomic Energy Commission, and is stripped off when it gets contaminated from radioactive experiments.

What About Cities

"Even if this could be made practical for ships," Dr. Bradley writes, "how would we be able to take care of our cities with their brick buildings and cement sidewalks?"

He says the queerest stuff turns up radioactive: A ship's brass bell, chemicals from a first-aid locker, a bar of soap.

A radioactive cloud was followed 200 miles from Bikini. Rocks at the atoll were radioactive from atoms sticking to their surface, although waves rolled over them at high tide.

A great oil slick, heavily impregnated with radioactivity, swept several miles out to sea beyond the atoll, and then drifted back to foul the sandy shores with a danger that may take years to dissolve.

Red and purple coral heads underwater in the lagoon bleached white. Sand dredged from the lagoon bottom and dumped on the fantail of a ship was so radioactive that the entire catch was thrown overboard.

Needle Jumped Off Dial

A diver looking over ship wreckage on the lagoon bottom sat on a stanchion to rest 195 feet below the surface. A Geiger counter in the diver's suit picked up so much radioactivity from the stanchion that on the diver's ship above, where the counter registered, the needle jumped off the dial.

Fish in Bikini Lagoon—20 mile by 10—became radioactive. Seagoing fish caught outside the lagoon all were radioactive for a time.

"With a large number of bombs exploding in coastal areas and seaports . . . conceivably the fishing industry could be wrecked, and the fish rendered unsafe for eating at a time when food of any kind was critically needed."

Coca-Cola Deal For Bergen Show Near Completion

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—A deal was reported today to be near completion of Coca-Cola to take over sponsorship of Edgar Bergen's $25,000-a-week radio show.

The NBC broadcasts are being dropped by Standard Brands.

There was trade speculation that if CBS succeeds in "buying" Comedian Jack Benny in a capital gains deal and get him away from NBC, the new sponsors of the Bergen show might also switch him to CBS.

CBS is said to have offered Benny 4 million dollars for a lifetime "purchase" of his services.

Benny would get a lump sum on which he would pay the 25 per cent capital gains tax instead of the higher personal income tax each year.

Bad Dollars For Good

By Mark Sullivan

The Bond-Buyer's Problem

THE GOVERNMENT, through widespread campaigns, sells United States savings bonds to the public. Some 75 million persons now hold them. These bonds are sound. The promises made in them are scrupulously kept. Every buyer of a bond will get back the number of dollars promised, with the interest promised, at the time promised or when the bondholder asks for them.

Further than that, the widespread sale of these bonds is in the public interest. Granted that the Government must borrow money, borrowing it from individual purchasers of savings bonds is better than borrowing it from banks. For the savings bonds are kept in the hands of those who buy them; they are, so to speak, sterilized; while Government borrowing from banks sets in motion an expansion of active credit, which, under present conditions, tends to increase the cost of living and inflation. In the interest of the Government and of the people as a whole, it is desirable that buying of savings bonds be encouraged. To that end, and in every respect, is is desirable that the experience of those who buy the bonds be satisfactory to them.

It is not enough that the bond-buyer get back the number of dollars he paid, as he always will. He deserves also that the dollar he gets back should have the same purchasing power, should buy the same amount of goods, approximately at least, as when he paid them for the bond. Granted that some unavoidable condition, especially war, may reduce the purchasing power of the dollar, the bond-buyer remains entitled to assume that the Government still will not in peacetime follow policies which reduce the dollar's purchasing power. This assumption the Government has not lived up to.

OMIT THE PART of the reduction in dollar purchasing power which took place during the war, that can be acepted as a hazard and sacrifice which may come to all. Consider only the reduction that has taken place in peacetime, since the war ended. This coincides roughly with President Truman's Administration—he took office in April, 1945, and the war with Germany ended in May, with Japan in August.

The reduction in dollar purchasing power between April, 1945, and today is expressed in many statistics, varying somewhat with different lines of goods and in different sections of the country. Besides, statistics are figures, they are not concrete, they are not goods. The drop in dollar purchasing power between April, 1945, and today can be made concrete by showing it in terms of goods.

Had President Truman, on the day he took office, looked at advertisements of food prices in The Washington Post, he would have found, among others, these typical items:

Butter, 48 cents a pound.

Potatoes, 37 cents per 10-pound sack.

Leg of lamb, 39 cents a pound.

Flour, 55 cents per 10-pound sack.

And had Mr. Truman looked at the corresponding advertisements last week, he would have found the following prices for the same items:

Butter, 73 cents a pound.

Potatoes, 59 cents per 10-pound sack.

Leg of lamb, 59 cents a pound.

Flour, 69 cents per 10-pound sack.

About the causes of these rises in prices of food, doubtless Mr. Truman would make an argument of a sort he did during the campaign. For the present purpose, however, omit all that. What we are seeking in these figures is the experience of a bondholder who bought his bond in April, 1945. In paying $18.75 for a bond, he paid, in terms of goods, roughly 50 10-pound sacks of potatoes; and so, with variations as to the other items. And if he turned in his bond last week he got back only 36 sacks, and so as to the other items.

OMITTING CONTENTIOUS arguments about causes, a chief duty upon Mr. Truman as he begins his new Administration is to discontinue any policies or practices which may have caused increase in cost of living and thus worked detriment to bondholders; to see to it that so far as possible the bondholder gets back as much purchasing power as he paid in. The widespread distribution of bonds is precious, both to the buyers and in the public interest, and deserves safeguards in proportion to its preciousness.

Darvisul, New Polio Drug, Held Apparently Not Very Effective

The American Academy of Pediatrics yesterday heard two pediatricians report that Darvisul, a new polio drug, "apparently is not a wonder drug and apparently not very effective."

The report was made by Dr. Clifford G. Grulee, jr., of the University of Texas medical school, Galveston, and Dr. Robert B. Lawson, of the North Carolina Baptist Hospital, Winston-Salem.

"The preliminary examination of some patients at treatment centers in Texas and North Carolina shows that Darvisul is not very effective, although it may help to some extent. It apparently cannot be counted on to prevent paralysis in humans, or to aid materially in a patient's recovery," they said.

Dr. Grulee and Dr. Lawson emphasized that the final word on Darvisul must await the reports of other physicians who used it.

[The United Press said the academy refused to go on record as rejecting all offers of Federal aid "direct or indirect." It was recommended that "action to seek Federal aid be held in abeyance without prejudice to justification of Federal aid or its need."]

Dr. Warren R. Sisson, Boston, today took office as president of the academy, succeeding Dr. John A. Toomey of Cleveland. Dr. Edward B. Shaw, professor of pediatrics at the University of California, was elected president to take office next year.

Truman Sees Austin At Walter Reed

President Truman visited Warren R. Austin, chief American delegate to the United Nations, at Walter Reed Hospital here late Sunday.

The White House said yesterday that Mr. Truman went to see Austin soon after arriving from Key West, Fla.

Austin flew home from Paris last Friday for treatment at Walter Reed. His ailment has been described as complications resulting from a cold.

Pope Decries 'Frenzied Search for Success'

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XII, speaking to several hundred clerical teachers here today, said Catholic education must aim at forming "a man of clear, solid and deep convictions to withstand the frenzied search for success and the effect of films and other media.

"The deep whirlpools of ideological battles overwhelm those who do not have sound principles," he declared.

Air Force Gives Up Rain Tests

The Air Force has decided to leave the ancient art of rain making to the Indians.

After nine months of sprinkling dry ice on clouds to cause rain, the Air Force said yesterday it isn't worth the effort.

"The experiments," an official told a reporter, "proved the seeding of clouds has not caused rain in amounts sufficient to be of economic significance."

Weather studies will continue at the Air Force Experimental Station at Wilmington, Ohio, where the tests were conducted, the official said. He denied reports the station would move.

The Army and Navy are working jointly with General Electric scientists on a small dry ice project. The purpose of this study, it was emphasized by both services, is not to cause rain or anything else, but to learn as much as possible about clouds.

Mrs. Gizycka's Questioning on Will Postponed

Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, scheduled to appear here today for pretrial questioning in her challenge of the will of her mother, Eleanor M. Patterson, has entered a New York Hospital.

William A. Roberts, attorney for Mrs. Gizycka, told District Court Judge James W. Morris yesterday that on Saturday Mrs. Gizycka entered Presbyterian Hospital in New York for tests which may lead to a major operation.

Physician's Affidavit

He submitted an affidavit from a New York physician stating that Mrs. Gizycka for two years has been suffering from "paroxysmal hypoglykemia," described as a shortage of sugar in the blood which produces "periodic attacks of faintness and dizziness."

The condition has become worse recently, said the physician, Dr. Martin De Forest Smith, and hospital tests are to determine whether Mrs. Gizycka has a pancreatic tumor.

While Roberts sought to have Mrs. Gizycka's appearance postponed to January 11, Judge Morris signed an order delaying it only to next Monday, pending further information on her condition.

Attorneys for the executors named in Mrs. Patterson's $16,586,571 will are seeking the deposition which is expected to provide a broad preview of Mrs. Gizycka's contest. Mrs. Gizycka alleges force and coercion were employed on her mother, who she claims was of unsound mind when she made the will.

Argument Ruled Out

Roberts sought to postpone Mrs. Gizycka's appearance on additional grounds that she has not had ready access to her mother's documents, and that premature questioning "will greatly embarrass the completion of her preparation (of the case) and may result in the destruction or loss of important written evidence."

Judge Morris refused to consider the argument, saying "That's not a reason for not taking a deposition."

Lobbying Act Attacked in Farm Cases

Federal statutes regulating lobbying were attacked as unconstitutional yesterday in District Court.

The charge was made by defense attorneys before Judge Edward M. Curran in moves to dismiss indictments of men allegedly involved in agricultural lobbying before the Congress.

Indicted last June on the charges were Robert Harriss, New York cotton broker; Tom Linder, Georgia Commissioner of Agriculture; Ralph W. Moore, of Washington; James E. McDonald, Texas Commissioner of Agriculture, the Farm Commissioner Council and the National Farm Committee.

They are charged with failing to register as lobbyists for farm legislation and to advance their own personal financial interests.

Federation Backs Suffrage Bill

The District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday decided to send a letter to new members of the Eighty-first Congress indorsing the Auchincloss bill for local suffrage.

The action was taken at a Hamilton Hotel meeting.

Dugan Expects No Tax Boost in Arlington

Arlington real estate tax rate probably "will not have to be raised" to pay for the recently voted school improvement program, County Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan said yesterday.

He said he based this personal opinion on three income factors which he hopes will cover cost of the school spending:

1. Roughly $400,000 more yearly is anticipated from two new Arlington taxes — one on businesses and professions, the other on auto licenses. They will take effect January 1, 1949.

2. "Times are good" — people "are paying their taxes," and the county may expect between 96 and 98 per cent of its tax bill to be collected. The present budget provides for 95 per cent collection. The difference would be extra income.

3. An expected 1950 reassessment of all Arlington real estate, eliminating "errors" in the present assessment, will increase the value of taxable property and hence income by as much as "one million dollars more" annually.

Elizabeth Bentley Fails to Appear At Remington Hearing

Elizabeth T. Bentley, the so-called Soviet spy queen, failed to appear yesterday at the Loyalty Review Board hearing of William Remington, a suspended Commerce official. She had accused Remington before congressional committees of giving her secret Government information which she turned over to other Soviet agents.

Miss Bentley, it was learned, wrote a letter to the board in which she merely said she would not appear. If she had appeared, the self-confessed spy would have been served with papers in answer a $100,000 slander suit against her which had been filed by Remington. The Commerce official's friends believe this is the real reason she did not appear.

It was also learned that this was the second time Miss Bentley had refused the board's invitation to appear and to tell what she knew about Remington and to permit herself to be cross-examined. The board does not have subpena power.

The loyalty case against Remington was based on Miss Bentley's testimony. No one else, it's reported, is available to substantiate her charges. On the other hand, Remington is said to have offered the board an armful of statements from people in all walks of life who said he was a good and loyal citizen.

A subcommitte headed by Chairman Seth W. Richardson is hearing the case behind closed doors. Another member is Harry Colmery, a prominent Kansas attorney. Remington is represented by Bethuel M. Webster of New York, and Joseph Rauh of this city.

STORY: About a month before the election a top-rung official in a housing agency called for the personnel file on himself and several of his colleagues in executive jobs.

When the files were returned it was observed that letters of indorsement from such Democratic bigwigs as Truman, Barkley, Rayburn, and others were missing. Kept in the files, however, were complimentary letters from GOP politicians.

The other day the files were called for again. The personnel folders were returned with the letters of indorsement from leading Democrats in a noticeable spot. The GOP letters were moved to the rear, perhaps some to the wastebasket.

How times change.

CENSUS is considering a plan to hire the Nation's 600,000 school teachers for a week beginning April 1, 1950, to take the population census. The pupils would be given a spring vacation at that time. The teachers would be given from $50 to $75 each for their help in the mammoth task.

The Bureau had been planning to hire about 150,000 enumerators for an average of one month each to count the people in this country. It's estimated the average enumerator would count 1000 people. But teacher groups are anxious to take over the job and Census is favorable to the idea since it isn't at all sure of being able to hire 150,00 part-time enumerators.

If the proposal works out, each teacher would be given an average of 250 persons to count and a week for the job.

WAA: About 4000 more War Assets employes will get 30-day lay-off around December 1. Another slash will be made on January 1. Fortunately, most WAA'ers have known for sometime that heavy firings were in the works.

By the end of this year the agency will be down to around 3500 employes from a post-war high of 60,000. Under the law WAA must go out of business by next February 28 and transfer its activities elsewhere. It's a good bet the President will urge Congress to repeal the law. Most people believe that WAA can liquidate faster if it is wiped out.

As a liquidating agency, WAA may by-pass Civil Service's lay-off rules. Nevertheless, a good many employes have appealed their lay-offs to Civil Service.

CIVIL SERVICE has made a ruling which certainly encourages mediocrity in Government. Also, it punishes employes who have earned promotions. Plainly, the ruling doesn't make good sense. This is it:

Civil Service has taken months, even a year or more, to grade and set up registers on exams. Meantime, some few employes who took the exams have been promoted to better jobs at Civil Service's approval. But the commission has a rule which says an employe must be in the job he's certified for at least six months in order to be eligible for permanent status.

A stickler for rules, the commission has refused to waive it after appeals from Navy, Budget Bureau and other agencies. The rule, incidentally, wasn't meant to cover cases where the employes involved were meritoriously promoted. It was enacted to prevent a Grade 9 employe, for example, from gaining status by being temporarily demoted to a Grade 2 job.

AGRICULTURE officials were both pleased and surprised to get a "fan letter from, of all people, a Kansas banker. The letter said in part:

"It is a great thing for the people of this country that Harry S. Truman has been returned to office to help guide us for the next four years. I want to go on record, after 31 years in the banking business, to say the past 15 years have been the most pleasant and profitable, ones in the memory of this writer."

Ministers Hear Blast At Morals Of Capital

Void of Democracy, Says La Roe; Liquor, Gambling, Assault Record Assailed

"The Nation's capital city is a city in which democracy does not exist," Wilbur LaRoe, Washington lawyer and former moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the USA, asserted yesterday.

LaRoe, a leading Presbyterian layman, spoke at the monthly meeting of the Washington Ministerial Union at National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle.

Washington, he declared, is a city "in which race prejudice is the rule even in the churches, in which liquor is sold even in drug and grocery stores, in which the quantity of liquor consumed leads the land, and the number of felonious assaults leads the whole Nation.

"Gambling has always been many steps ahead of the police," he continued.

He urged "a capital city which may set an example to the Nation for cleanness and goodness, instead of an example of drunkenness and crime and race prejudice."

LaRoe called for the breakdown of race prejudice, which he said, "is the most cruel thing in the whole world today."

"I am pleading for a type of Christian leadership which will shock the church out of its lethargy," he declared.

The Protestant Church is not alive to the danger which threatens it, he said. The primary weakness today is the complacency of the members of the church, he stated. This lack of zeal, he continued, is more deplorable because millions around the world are pleading to be saved.

One of the greatest evils of the church is the great ease with which one can become a member, he continued. What we need today is a nervous concern for Christianity, he said.

Devotions at the meeting were conducted by Dr. Stephen Gill Spottswood, pastor of John Wesley A. M. E. Zion Church.

John Halko of the Washington Federation of Churches announced that an architectural institute for clergymen and church members will be held on January 24. On November 30 the annual federation dinner will be held at 6:45 p. m. at the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, 1527 Newton st. nw., it was announced.

Burned Boy, 4, Relives Agony in Fitful Sleep

By John London
Post Reporter

Sometimes, usually at night, Michael Rector, 4, gets delirious. His bandage-swathed body convulses with pain.

"Get me out of here, daddy," he cries. "I'm on fire."

Near death at Casualty Hospital, the sandy blond boy is reliving the agonies of Friday a week ago, November 12. He was critically burned while he and chums were playing with matches.

Once, recently, his tortured mind imagined his hair was on fire. Frenzied with fright, he ripped a handful of hair from his head.

In more lucid moments, he plays fitfully with toys neighbors have brought. But thoughts about how he became a human firebrand keep flickering back.

Little Michael has third degree burns on 75 per cent of his body, from the top of his ches to the top of his ankles. The doctor says "it seemed certain when they brought him in that he'd die in 24 hours."

His parents stand by him 24 hours a day, in shifts. The father, Everett, 35, auto mechanic, and the mother, Frances Rector, take turns staying with Mike, sleeping, and minding the other five children, aged 1 to 12, at home, 613 Elliott st. ne.

All the parents know about the incident is that Mike came running home Friday a week ago. He was screaming "Mommy, I'm burning up."

"I picked up a bedspread and threw it over him," the father recalls. "The smoke whished up in the air."

"Then I rushed him into a cab and I saw he was still on fire and I pulled the bedspread around him to smother the flames."

According to the father, Mike says he was playing with two boys, 5 and 6 years old in an abandoned garage half a block from Mike's home.

"He says they tied him up with rope and then they set fire to him with matches," the father reports.

Police say they did not find substantiation of the claim Mike was set afire by other boys. They say they learned he bought matches in a store up the street and got burned trying to stamp out a fire that he and another youngster playfully started in the garage.

Meanwhile, the doctor says it will be a miracle if Mike lives to enjoy Christmas, or even his fourth birthday, which falls on Christmas Eve. It's a "big red wagon that he wants."

The spunky little fellow says when he gets big he'll be a doctor "because they hurt me an' when I grow up I wanna hurt them."

4 Arrested In Dance Raid Are Indicted

Four men, arrested at a Negro-white dance sponsored by pro-Wallace groups in Laborers' Hall, 523 New Jersey ave. nw., October 10, were indicted on lottery charges by the District grand jury yesterday.

The men, accused of operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips, are Winston C. Edwards, 30, of 2914 Sherman ave. nw.; Sidney Goldreich, 25, of 3812 Florence dr., Alexandria; Frank E. Trusclair, 27, of 2911 Sherman ave. nw., and Edward S. Majchrzyk, 24, of 516 2d st. nw.

Police who raided the dance said the defendants were offering prizes of liquor at 25 cents a chance.

The raid on the dance, sponsored by the United Negro Allied Veterans of America, stirred the ire of the District Progressive Party. Telegrams of protest were sent to President Truman and to the District Commissioners.

In a group of separate cases out of a total of 43 indictments returned, four other men were indicted on charges of operation and possession of lottery slips.

They are: Theodore F. Hawkins, 36, 3220 Warder st. nw.; Nathaniel Y. Taylor, 36, of 1450 Corcoran st. nw.; Peter C. Gabardini, Capitol Heights, Md.; William T. Whitehead, 43, of 3537 13th st. nw.

Two men were indicted under the new sex law for "unnatural and perverted practices." They are Bennie Buntone, 37, no fixed address, and Edward P. Flaherty, 18, a sailor attached to the Navy communications school at Cheltenham, Md.

Strayer Meeting Senate Group on School Survey

Dr. George D. Strayer, director of a Congress-authorized survey of District public schools, will discuss today with members of a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee for the District the section of his report on buildings.

Dr. Strayer will meet with Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho), chairman of the committee, and Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.).

The report will analyze District school building needs and make recommendations for construction and remodeling. Dr. Strayer will submit in March a report dealing with the entire public school system, including curriculum, teachers' salaries and the financial support of the schools.

In Fairfax

Man Seized As Operator Of Huge Still

Fairfax County police yesterday arrested and charged a third man with operation of a 2500-gallon capacity still which they raided last Friday.

Luther King, 48, was arrested at his home near Lorton, Va., by Detective Sergt. Cecil E. Brown and M. K. Bryant, Virginia ABC Board investigator.

Police said King was identified by two men arrested at the still Friday as the man who had employed them.

King was released on $500 bond for hearing December 15 in County Trial Justice Court.

Hearings for the other men, Robert Coles, 38, of 916 N. Columbus st., Alexandria, and John D. Gayles, 30, of 4 E. Braddock rd., Alexandria, will be held the same day.

2000 to Get Free Parking On Fringe Lot

25th and E Sts. Facility Bids For Patronage of Women Shoppers

Two thousand tickets for free parking on the Cass-Heurich lot, one of the two in the District's fringe parking plan, will be distributed to attract women shoppers to the facility.

The tickets will be handed out by P. Y. K. Howat, chairman of the District Motor Vehicle Parking Agency and stanch supporter of the fringe lot scheme, in an attempt to build up patronage for the lot at 25th and E sts. nw.

The tickets will be in the form of maps showing location of both lots and "easy ways to them." The tickets will be honored at the Cass-Heurich lot for five hours of parking by women shoppers. The usual charge is 25 cents.

Howat said last night 150 tickets were distributed to members of the Cosmopolitan and Reciprocity clubs at luncheons, which he addressed. Additional distribution will be made at other club luncheons in the next month, Howat said.

The Cass-Heurich lot is operated by the Merchants Parking Service which has not yet considered the free tickets. Howat said, however, that he would meet the cost "personally," if the service decided against them.

Last week the Cass-Heurich lot had 241 customers and the Municipal Center tract had 1565. For the first two months of operations, the Cass-Heurich lot has averaged 245 cars a week and the Center lot 1376.

Plans for additional fringe lots have been tabled until the Parking Agency has made a "fair" test of the present lots, officials said.

Landis to Address 100 District Lawyers

James M. Landis, former dean of Harvard Law School, will address a luncheon meeting of 100 attorneys on "The Role of the Liberal Lawyer in Washington," at 12:45 p. m. today in the American Veterans Committee Clubhouse, 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw. Landis formerly was chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Sailor Rescues Man in River

A sailor, attached to the Experimental Diving Unit at the Naval Gun Factory, demonstrated his underwater skill yesterday when he rescued a man who leaped from the Eleventh st. bridge about 11 a. m.

Jesse James, 26, damage controlman third class, dived into the Anacostia River with his work uniform on and swam 30 feet to save the life of Clyde Barksdale, 38, shoeshiner, of 206 5th st. se.

James is from Independence, Mo. He has been in the Navy here since April. He said he was on his way to "chow" when he "saw some fellows on the bridge waving their arms." As soon as he realized the cause of the excitement, James got rid of his watch and wallet and jumped off the seawall west of the bridge.

James, a full-blooded Euchee Indian, said he was named after the famous Jesse James because his grandmother used to feed the bank robber meals between sorties back in Sapulpa, Okla.

Barksdale was unconscious and about 7 inches underwater when he reached him, James said. The rescue took about 20 minutes in all, according to the sailor who applied artificial respiration until a Navy doctor arrived.

Barksdale was removed to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation. Police said he told them he was employed in a shoeshine parlor in the 300 block of Pennsylvania ave. se. and "was disgusted with living." The man's physical condition was "good" doctors at Gallinger said.

Stanley J. Woolwine, 1343 F st. ne., was a witness to the jump, according to police, but was unable to reach Barksdale in time to prevent his leap Woolwine told police Barksdale removed his hat, coat and shoes before he jumped.

'Joyous' Trail Detours Briefly

A disciple of the open road stopped his "joyous wandering in idleness" yesterday long enough to pay an enforced call on a Bethesda judge.

And to Trial Magistrate Warren Browning of Bethesda Police Court the defendant, John C. Rieben, 37, of no fixed address, was "a philosopher, not a vagrant."

So he set the happy vagabond free.

Picked up for vagrancy on November 15, Rieben lost in Montgomery County Jail, the freedom he worshipped, for seven days.

The same thing has happened in California, Texas, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi during the past 10 years, he said.

"I try to stay as individualistic as I can," the defendant explained. "I'm not anti-social, but to me happiness is freedom."

When asked why he didn't work, he declared: "I would rather be a consumer than a producer."

And to a suggestion from the bench that he might write of his experiences, the vagabond declared: "I've had adventures, but most have been misadventures."

After court, Bethesda policemen, uncomprehending, watched Rieben amble slowly toward the District line in the pouring rain.

How to Extinguish a Boat Fire

1. Get a Crane— Fire broke out aboard the 36-foot wooden launch, Katy, yesterday afternoon as workmen were preparing to lower it from a barge after a welding job. The men were unable to extinguish the flames, so Samuel Putman, barge crane operator, lowered the little craft, which is shown here, pouring forth clouds of smoke, as it hit the water

2. Dunk the Boat— Crane Operator Putman continued to lower away—until the launch was thoroughly dunked. When the fireboat arrived, there was nothing for it to do. Both launch and barge are owned by the Merritt-Chapman-Scott Corp., doing construction work near the 14th st. bridge over the Potomac, from which these pictures were taken

By William Klemm—The Washington Post

3. Hang It Up to Dry— Fire out, the crane lifts the launch clear of the river and lets the water drain out. The fire was believed to have been caused by hot metal igniting gasoline in the hold. The boat's cabin was damaged but the hull came through unharmed. The craft is used to carry company employes to and from their jobs

Barrett Asks Hiring of 80 Policewomen As Clerks

3-Point Plan Also Calls for Broader Age Requirements To Fill Vacancies

District Commissioners today will consider a three-point plan submitted yesterday by Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett for increasing the force.

Barrett, who has declared that 200 present vacancies cannot be filled, yesterday asked for:

1. Hiring of 80 policewomen to relieve male policemen from clerical duties for "the more strenuous aspects of street duty."

2. Broadening the age requirement for male police recruits from the present 21 to 31 years span to 21 to 35.

3. A similar expansion for female police recruits from the present 25 to 35 range to 21 to 35, thus setting the same age limitations for both sexes.

The police head informed the Commissioners he has been "experiencing great difficulty" in recruiting male appointees and therefore recommended adding women for assignment "principally as station clerks in precinct and division offices and the Communications and Records Bureau." This would free male police in such assignments for street duties.

Barrett said the force not only was unable to fill existing vacancies but was "barely holding our own in the matter of actual replacements" for policemen leaving the force for various reasons.

First plans by police heads were to hire additional civilian workers to free desk policemen for street duties. They found, however, that the force had great difficulty in retaining civilians in the face of higher pay offered in Federal agencies. Policewomen receive higher pay than most of the civilian workers who would be employed in the clerical posts.

John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners, who supervises police activities, said he was "sympathetic" to the request for 80 policewomen, but was undecided on the changes in age limitations.

2 D. C. Men Convicted In Gaithersburg Theft

Two District men were convicted in Montgomery County Circuit Court yesterday of housebreaking and larceny in the theft of $738 in valuables September 16 from the Gaithersburg, Md., warehouse of Southern States' Cooperative, Inc. A third man from Montgomery County pleaded guilty.

Sentencing was deferred. The three are Paul R. Dunagan, 23, Glen Echo, who pleaded guilty; Frank F. Natoli, 20, 3421 Q st. nw., and Albert Lamb, 28, 2403 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Falls Church Awards Water Pipe Contracts

The Lynchburg Foundry Co. last night was awarded a contract for 24-inch pipe and fittings for the proposed new Falls Church water supply system. The firm's estimated bid was $354,288.88.

In a second award, the town council accepted a bid of $131,833.34 from the Glamorgan Pipe and Foundry Co., also of Lynchburg, for 12-inch pipe and fittings.

The Rensselaer Valve Co. of Troy, N. Y., was successful bidder for valve installation with an offer of $15,689.30.

Award of the water pipe contracts was the second step in the city's plan to link Falls Church almost directly to the Dalecarlia Reservoir in Washington by a new water supply system.

On October 26 the city sold a million-dollar water bond issue to pay for the entire project to Scott, Horner & Mason of Lynchburg, Va., on their bid of 2.79 per cent interest.

The new water system will join the existing mains on the Virginia bank of the Potomac River at Chain Bridge. Falls Church now gets most of its water from Arlington County.

The city must next award a contract to lay the pipe. Then, city officials say, work will get under way when weather conditions permit, probably in early spring.

Correction

A story appearing in Sunday's Washington Post about a speech clinic at George Washington University incorrectly described an exercise used in improving the speech of cleft palate cases.

Properly the exercise is to place a cold mirror under the nostrils and then practice all speech sounds except the nasal ones of the M, N and NG. If moisture collects on the mirror, sounds are not going as they should through the mouth. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Credit Unions In D. C. Show Rapid Growth

By S. Oliver Goodman

Credit unions in Washington are experiencing their most active year and enjoying their fastest growth.

Number of associations, assets and total loans all are at new high marks here, according to Claude R. Orchard, director of the Bureau of Federal Credit Unions, Federal Security Administration.

Exact figures are compiled at yearend, but Orchard estimated yesterday that number of credit union members will exceed 75,000 here for the second time in the group's 100-year history. He also advanced these "conservative" estimates on what this yearend's figures will show:

Total loans, six million dollars, up 40 per cent from last year; members, 75,000; up 13 per cent; assets, 10 million, up 19 per cent.

Washington lends itself to organization of this type of personal-lending unit, Orchard commented, because of its large and closely knit Government agencies.

Up until this year, the high-water mark in local credit union history was in 1941, when there were 78,632 members. During the war, membership fell off sharply but has shown a sharp recovery since the war ended. Comparisons by years follow:

HOTEL TRENDS: Interesting to note in the recent nine-month statement of Hilton Hotels Corp. is the fact that food and beverage revenues exceed income for rooms. The hotel chain, which operates the Mayflower here, reported that room revenues totaled $13,238,768 for the nine months ended September 30, compared with food and beverage revenues of $13,801,458.

DIVIDEND: Directors of Mayflower Hotel Corp. declared a dividend of 30 cents a share on common stock, payable December 15 to stock of record November 22. Since December 19, 1946, the Mayflower has been under the management of Hilton Hotels Corp. which owns about 69 per cent of the outstanding stock.

ODD LOTS: Suburban National Bank of Silver Spring on Wednesday will mail Christmas Club checks totaling $363,140 to 5450 depositors . . . Steel output this week is scheduled at 99.2 per cent of capacity, just under its record peak . . . BIDDING CLOSE: Keen competition marked bidding for the $0-million-dollar offering of Public Service Electric & Gas 3 per cent debentures. Only $50 separated the two top bids for the issue. A syndicate headed by Halsey, Stuart & Co. won the award on a bid of 100.68. This was only one mill per $1000 bonds from Morgan, Stanley & Co.'s 100.6799. The reoffering is expected at 101.209 to yield 2.90 per cent.

Christoffel Perjury Verdict Upheld by Court of Appeals

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the perjury conviction and two-to-six-year sentence of Harold Christoffel, erstwhile president of Local 248, United Auto Workers.

Christoffel, a leader during the Allis-Chalmers strike troubles in Milwaukee last year, had been convicted in District Court of perjury before the House Labor Committee in denying he had Communist connections.

Recently Christoffel and eight other former officers of the union were expelled from membership.

O. John Rogge, attorney for the former labor leader, based an appeal mainly on the contention that a quorum of the committee was not present when Christoffel uttered the statements labeled as false. He said he would carry the case to the Supreme Court.

In unanimously rejecting the appeal, the court held that it was shown that a majority (constituting a quorum) of the House committee was on hand when the hearing started and that no one raised the quorum point at the time.

Hyattsville Takes Out Insurance

Hyattsville Council last night awarded a contract to the American Association Insurance Co. for comprehensive liability insurance of the city on an annual premium of $1646.24. The contract would provide $3000 and $10,000 coverage for each city vehicle.

The policy will cover more than 40 municipal employes and all city, fire, police and sanitation equipment.

In other actions, the council:

Appropriated $919 to the warehouse building fund to install water and sewerage lines to the Hyattsville warehouse.

Passed an ordinance assessing Emerson st. residents, from Rhode Island ave. to 43d ave., $7.96 per front foot, for street paving, and $1.39 per front foot for sidewalk improvements.

Announced that the Municipal Planning Committee will meet tonight at 8 in the courtroom of the County Service Building. The agenda will include a vote on a new municipal building, a new firehouse, improvement of streets

Georgetown Citizens Vote To Bar Reds

The Georgetown Citizens Association last night voted a constitution change which excludes Communist Party members and persons belonging to subversive groups from the association.

The amendment was passed unanimously. As to Communist Party members, it excludes all persons "unable to answer the question, 'Are you a Communist?' in the negative."

Strong opposition to commercial or residential use of alley structures was voiced at the meeting held at St. John's Parish Hall, Potomac and O sts. nw.

The action followed a statement by Col. L. I. Peak, owner of a group of buildings in an alley at the rear of 3300 P st. nw. Peak recently remodeled some of the buildings for use as dwellings, studios or small shops.

Peak told the citizens' group he had "the right to use the buildings in some manner," and contended he paid higher taxes than some owners of property fronting on the streets in that section.

The association elected Teunis Collier, a contractor of 3001 Dent pl. nw., president. Others elected were Brig. Gen. Karl S. Bradford, first vice president; Col. Milo H. Brinkley, second vice president; Miss Emily Brown, secretary, and C. Wendell Shoemaker, treasurer.

Federation Is Upheld In Segregation Stand

Opposition of the Federation of Citizens Associations to nonsegregation in playground and recreation areas was upheld last night by the North Capitol Citizens Association, meeting at the Atonement Lutheran Church, N. Capitol and U sts.

The federation earlier this month supported the Recreation Board, which maintains segregation at playgrounds, in the board's fight with the Interior Department for control over 62 District recreation areas.

Lieut. George Cooper of the Twelfth Police Precinct told the group that authorities are working on the problem of making streetcar loading platforms more visible at night.

The good record of Twelfth Precinct police was praised by John F. Hardie, president of the citizens group.

Recreation Authority Favored for Board

The Northwest Council of Citizens Associations last night voiced its support of the District Recreation Board in the controversy over control of recreation facilities in Washington.

The council met at 4645 Garfield st. nw.

A second resolution called for increased Federal appropriations, based proportionately on the use of taxable land in the District, to allow for expanded governmental services.

A new slate of officers chosen at the meeting includes Gordon M. Atherholt, MacArthur Boulevard Citizens Association, reelected president; J. S. Gorrell, Burleith Citizens Association, vice president; Mrs. Josef Vanier, Friendship Citizens Association, secretary, and Henry M. Fowler, Chevy Chase Citizens Association, reelected treasurer.

Md. to Spend 200 Millions on Roads in 1949

The Maryland State Roads Commission plans to spend 200 million dollars in the next five years for road construction and improvement, William F. Childs jr., chief engineer of the commission, said last night.

The engineer told members of the Prince Georges Chamber of Commerce meeting at the Prince Georges Country Club that the program calls for expenditure for Prince Georges County alone of $6,490,900 next year.

He said this year's program in the county called for the expenditure of $2,793,382 involving 28.235 miles of roadway including the Marlboro Bypass, Queens Chapel rd., and the Laurel Bypass, the resurfacing and widening of Route 301 (Crain Highway) from Priest Bridge to Upper Marlboro, Route 198 at Laurel, Route 4 at Forestville.

With work to be advertised in the next six weeks, this year's State-wide program involving 337 miles of road will cost about $49,334,120, the speaker decalred.

Up until now, he said, the rate of spending had been about seven million dollars a year.

Childs quoted a report of the commission made in 1940 as saying some 2500 miles of State highways were obsolescent and estimating that 216 million dollars would be required to improve them.

Another speaker, County Engineer Arthur W. Tayman, discussed general improvement plans and asserted that many ideas under discussion would be too expensive to realize unless Federal funds were forthcoming.

Garner Celebrates 80th Birthday by Hunting for Buck

Uvalde, Tex., Nov. 22 (U.P.)—John Nance Garner, who served as Vice President under Franklin D. Roosevelt for two terms, celebrated his eightieth birthday today by hunting for his first buck of the season.

"The grand old man of Texas politics" had little to say about national affairs on reaching the eightieth milestone.

Looking back to September, when he was host to President Truman on a campaign swing through Texas, he commented wryly, "I had the gout for two weeks after Harry Truman was here."

His one concern over his hunting trip today was whether his feet would bother him.

Plan Approved To Dissolve Holding Firm

By The Associated Press

The Securities and Exchange Commission last night announced approval of a plan to dissolve Commonwealth & Southern Corp. of Delaware, one of the Nation's largest public utility holding companies.

SEC ordered the company liquidated in 1940 after finding its corporate structure and vast holdings constituted a violation of the Federal Holding Company Act.

Numerous plans subsequently were advanced for liquidating the company's assets before today's approval of proposals which provided that:

1. Holders of Commonwealth's outstanding preferred shares will receive, for each share held, securities in various substidiaries of the holding company.

2. After these distributions, holders of common stock will receive securities from other Commonwealth subsidiaries, principally the common stock of the Southern Company, Wilmington, Del., and Ohio Edison Co., Akron. Distribution of these assets, however, are subject to repayment by Commonwealth of bank loans which may total 25 million dollars.

California Tackles Northwestern in Rose Bowl

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THAT WAS A pretty futile exhibition by the Redskins in Philadelphia the other day when they went out to try to beat the Eagles and keep their Eastern Division title hopes alive. The fact that the Redskins are in the same league with the wondrous Eagles is no proof that they belong in it.

POVICH

The Eagles, with Steve Van Buren and Tommy Thompson and Coach Greasy Neale and all their good football players going for them, are in the same position of dominance in the Eastern Division that the Chicago Bears used to enjoy in the West. In the years when the Redskins were winning Eastern championships, they didn't have much to beat. Now it's tragically different for the Washington club. Getting past the Eagles is rough.

Some quarters suggest that the Redskins put up a great battle in Philadelphia, but I didn't think it was much contest and the Redskins were lucky to get as close as 42 to 21. That final score suggests that the Eagles were twice as potent as the Redskins but a review of the proceedings elevates the Eagles to even more mastery of the Redskins. The mere score hides too many of the facts.

THIS WAS TO BE the big test for both clubs, with the Eagles in a position virtually to clinch the Eastern title and the Redskins battling to stay in the race. So the Eagles, with the mark of a good ball club, jumped into a three touchdown lead before the Redskins could score. And when the Redskins made motions about getting tough and scored twice, the Eagles poured on three more touchdowns.

Two of those Redskin touchdowns could be described as "those things." That 79-yard pass from Sammy Baugh to Hal Crisler was a thriller but it wasn't the play the Redskins planned. Baugh was magnificent after being trapped, stumbling and running for his life before getting away his long pass but if the Eagles were stunned by the developments, so was the Redskins' coaching brigade.

You'd have to call Dick Poillon an alert guy and a good back for getting in the way of Van Buren's lateral on the Redskins' seven-yard line and toting it 93 yards to a touchdown. But that score stemmed from the Eagles' greed, not anything the Redskins originated. The Eagles rolled to their six touchdowns right out of Neale's script.

THE REDSKINS' running game was a puerile thing in contrast to the block-busting charges of Van Buren and they netted only 44 yards rushing all afternoon. VanBuren's one-man show rolled up 171 yards for the Eagles and it was apparent from the start that the Redskins would go only as far as Baugh's throwing arm could take them.

And Baugh found himself over-matched, too. That's a rare day for Sammy, but in Tommy Thompson the Eeagles had a guy who completed the first seven passes he threw. But maybe it's not too surprising that Thompson out-performed Baugh. He's No. 1 passer in the league by a wide margin and it's rough on the Redskins when they have to face up to Van Buren and Pritchard and Thompson, too.

It was a sweet triumph for Coach Greasy Neale. No coach was ever entitled to more bows. Neal sent his substitute end, Neil Armstrong in for one play, and then called him out. But meanwhile Armstrong had grabbed a touchdown pass. And just before he sent Rookie Halfback Jack Myers into the game, Neale literally gave Myers the blueprint for a scoring play, off a large placard. Myers raced 29 yards to a touchdown.

ON THIS LATEST Monday morning it was not pleasant reading once more for the National Football League club owners who could peruse the attendance figures and note that their teams were outdrawn by the despised All-America Conference. The three AAC games of the day averaged 29,027 customers to the 22,432 averaged by the five NFL games.

With the Cleveland Browns as the attraction, the AAC Yankees drew New York's biggest crowd of the pro football season by far, 52,518 and the AAC figures bettered the average crowd of the older league despite the mere 9,336 at Brooklyn.

By this time the Green Bay Packers ought to be a deep concern to the NFL. The Packers drew only 12,639 at home against the Giants Sunday, approximately the same-size crowd that the Redskins drew against the Packers a few weeks before. Green Bay, once a citadel of the pro game, is now taking shape as a liability to the league.

Editor Says Nevada Story Misread

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Marty Berg, editor of Sports-Week, said today, "It is unfortunate that University of Nevada officials read into our story statements which were not made."

The university threatened the New York publication with a libel suit if it didn't retract charges that Nevada's football team lost to Santa Clara "for the specific benefit of Nevada gamblers."

"Publication of the story in Sports-Week was not with malicious intent nor careless," Berg said in a statement.

"We published the story in the interest of clean sports in this country, which is especially needed so far as college football is concerned."

He concluded his statement with: "We commend the Nevada situation to the Governor of that State. We believe it warrants his inspection, if Nevada is to occupy any wholesome position in college athletics in this country."

Attendance At College Games Here Up 30,000

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

College football is on the upgrade in Washington.

More people attended fewer collegiate games this year than in 1947. This is in direct contrast to baseball and professional football which showed a drop at the gate this year.

Compared to the 138,000 who saw 14 college games here last fall, over 163,000 attended 11 games this season.

Maryland led the pack with 74,302 for its three outings at Griffith Stadium. Georgetown attracted 49,872 for five games and George Washington had 39,300 for three contests at the ball park.

Terp Increase $28,000

The Maryland increase this season over 1947 was approximately 25,000 for two less games. Georgetown was up 10,000 for five games—the same number of home contests last year—and G. W. upped its spectator interest to about 10,000 also for three games, one less than last season.

Maryland's average attendance for three games was approximately 25,000; about 10,000 saw each of the five Hoya home tilts while an average of 13,000 sat in on the three Colonial home games.

More attractive schedules and a better brand of football, both by the home teams and the visitors, were responsible for the increase, athletic directors at the three schools pointed out last night.

N. C. Game Sets Record

In the combined attendance of two games—Duke and North Carolina—Maryland outdrew Georgetown for five games and G. W. for three games.

A record Washington collegiate crowd of 34,588 saw the Tar Heel-Terp game while 21,914 saw the Duke affair.

This year the Terps played all of their home games in Griffith Stadium. Last season, only one, the Carolina game, was held in the ball park, the others in cramped Byrd Stadium at College Park which seats only about 11,000.

16,845 Largest for Hoyas

Georgetown's largest crowd of the seasop, 16,845, was for the Boston College. It was the first time the Eagles' had visited Washington and the turnout was considered excellent inasmuch as the Hoyas had dropped their first game.

The Colonial increase was due chiefly to its startling victory over Virginia. G. W. returned to Griffith Stadium the next week to play Kansas, an outstanding team at the time, and 15,000 greeted the Colonials.

G. W.'s biggest gate was for the Maryland game which 16,541 attended.

Athletic directors of the three schools are already busy completing their schedules for 1949. Most of the slates are about ready and each school promises bigger and better games for 1949.

SMU Picks Cotton Foe but It's a Secret

Dallas, Nov. 22 (AP).—Southern Methodist University players selected their first choice for a New Year's Day Cotton Bowl opponent by unanimous vote late today—but kept the name of the team a secret.

They had been asked not to tell by Dan D. Rogers, chairman of the board of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association. Rogers said there would be no official announcement of the opponent until tomorrow afternoon.

Southern Methodist won its way into the thirteenth annual New Year's Day classic by beating Baylor, 13-6, Saturday. Unofficially it was reported that the Mustangs' first choice was the University of North Carolina Tar Heels, unbeaten champions of the Southern Conference. The Tar Heels beat University of Texas, 34-7. SMU beat Texas, 21 to 6.

Athletic Director Matty Bell conducted a poll of the players in the Ownby Stadium dressing room. He said the delay in making the choice public was because availability of the team selected still remained in doubt.

Rogers hoped to clear up that point by tomorrow afternoon.

The unofficial reports said that behind the Tar Heels it was believed the Mustangs favored Georgia, if the Bulldogs can get by Georgia Tech Saturday; Oklahoma, champion of the Big Seven; Tulane, and undefeated Clemson.

It was understood here that Clemson would welcome a bid. Clemson played in the bowl in 1940, beating Boston College, 6-3.

Midget Races Called Off

Tom Lane, director of Majestic Raceways, announced last night that the midget auto racing program scheduled for Thanksgiving Day at Uline Arena has been called off.

The races were postponed pending changes in the air conditioning system.

Levi Jackson Named Yale Football Captain for '49

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 22 (AP).—Yale's football squad today unanimously elected Levi Jackson, star halfback, its 1949 captain.

Smiling broadly as teammates crowded about him, Jackson, the first Negro sports captain in Yale's history, said:

"It's swell."

Earlier today, he had been honored by being selected on the Associated Press' all-Eastern football team.

Jackson, Yale's Ebony Express for three seasons, succeeds Bill Conway of Cleveland, Ohio.

The 22-year-old Jackson, who ranks with little Albie Booth as one of the school's all-time backfield stars, will be the seventieth captain in the long history of the sport at Yale.

The 189-pound junior, a home town boy who starred in New Haven High School circles, also is a letterman in basketball, track and baseball, but his football prowess overshadows his versatility in other sports.

He entered Yale as a freshman in 1946 and was the varsity's leading ground gainer that season, gaining 806 yards as a fullback. He was hampered by injuries last season and was switched to left halfback this year by Herman Hickman, Yale's new head coach. He gained 639 yards and led the 1948 team in every individual offensive department except passing, in which he ranked second.

Lewis Wrestle Head at $25,000

New York, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Promoter Bill Johnston of New York announced today that peace at last had come to the wrestling world after more than 10 years of prolonged bickering.

Johnston disclosed that Ed (Strangler) Lewis, former heavyweight mat champion, has been named chairman of the Wrestling Promoters Association of America and Allied Countries at a salary of $25,000 a year.

Touch Downers Honor Griffith On 79th Birthday

Nat President Clark Griffith, who celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday November 20, yesterday told Touchdown Club listeners "the horoscope reveals that men born on that day are bull-headed and stubborn and had to have their own way.

"I mailed that information to the late Judge Landis," Griff said, "but I also had sense enough to remind him that November 20 was my birthday, too."

Griff shared the rostrum with Georgetown Football Coach Jack Hagerty.

Hagerty congratulated Bo Rowland, GW coach, for the Colonials' first victory over the Hoyas in 58 years Saturday. Hagerty also said he would vote for Rowland as coach of the year.

"Any man who can weather such beatings as Bo did against Maryland (47-0) and Duke (62-0) and come back and win a fair share of his games is tops. I salute him on a great job well done."

Cooper Loses To Osario, Sub for LeBrun

Taking the bout on five hours' notice, Filberto Osario of New York, defeated Jimmy Cooper, Washington bantamweight, in the 10-round feature at Turner's Arena last night.

Osario, who weighed 125 against 122 for Cooper, piled up an early lead with a vigorous attack to the body and easily won six of the first seven rounds.

The card attracted 719 customers, who chipped in to an $1151 net gate, an improvement over the last few weeks.

Baylor Asked To Dixie Bowl

Waco, Tex., Nov. 22 (AP).—Baylor Athletic Director Ralph Wolf said tonight, "We hope to go to the Dixie Bowl."

Wolf said that Baylor had been contacted by officials from four bowl games—the Dixie, Harbor, Azalia and Delta—but that he Bears hoped to be seleteed for the Birmingham (Ala.) Bowl New Year's Day. Wake Forest has already been selected as one of two teams for the Dixie Bowl.

The Chicago Stags were the highest-scoring team in the Basketball Association of America last season, notching 3640 points.

Waldorf's Bears Picked Over Oregon For BigGame

By Bob Myers

Pasadena, Calif., Nov. 22 (AP).—It's California's Golden Bears versus Northwestern's Wildcats in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day, and a golden opportunity for Cal's Coach Lynn (Pappy) Walford to teach his old school new tricks.

The faculty fathers of the Big Nine and Pacific Coast Conferences made their selections today for the thirty-fifth edition of the Tournament of Roses football game—the sire of all bowl events.

And the Coast representative will be California, coached to an undefeated 10-game season by Waldorf, who used to ply his trade at Northwestern. Pappy made the Rose Bowl in his second year at Cal.

It will be master versus pupil, too. Northwestern, which won seven of its nine games, is coached by young Bob Voights, a Wildcat tackle under Waldorf in the late 1930s.

Vote Not Made Public

The January 1, 1949, version pits one of the two best teams in the Pig Nine against one of the top two in the Coast Conference.

There was never much doubt about the selection of Northwestern. Big Nine Commissioner K. L. (Tug) Wilson announced the Wildcats were a unanimous choice, despite finishing second in the league race. Champion Michigan, which whipped Southern California, 49-0, in the 1948 Rose fracas, was prevented from returning by conference agreement.

But California, which shared the Coast title with Oregon, apparently had quite a ballot battle with the Webfoots for the right to enter on the ground floor of the 93,000-capacity saucer in picturesque Arroyo Seco.

PCC Commissioner Victor O. Schmidt declined to give the breakdown of the final tally, but did admit that the votes came in slowly indicating at least several of the 10 faculty representatives were weighing the issues carefully.

Oregon Beaten by Michigan

Both Oregon and California were undefeated in conference play, but the Webfoots lost one nonleague game to Michigan, 14-0, while the Golden Bears went through their full 10-game slate without tarnish.

Northwestern lost on'y to mighty Michigan, 28-0, and Notre Dame, 13-6.

The selections touched off great celebrations at Evanston and Berkeley.

"I'm very happy for California and our squad," Waldorf said, "that we were selected to represent the Coast conference. . . . It is a great responsibility and we accept it as such. We shall do our best to win."

Up at Eugene, Ore., a dejected Webfoot squad got the bad news that they had been outvoted. Coach

Oregon Coach Says We've 'Been Slighted'

Eugene, Oreg., Nov. 22 (AP).—After California was chosen for the Rose Bowl today Quarterback Norm Van Brocklin broke down and cried and Oregon Coach Jim Aiken said "I think our football team has been slighted."

"I'm from West Virginia," Aiken said in his gravel-throated tones, "and down there we never forget a favor or a slight.' He told a luncheon meeting he was not convinced California has the better team.

When Van Brocklin was called on to speak, he broke into tears.

Golden Bull, at Home in Mud, Takes Bowie Race

Picou Rides One Winner On Program

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 22.—Showing a liking for the sloppy track, Mrs. S. M. Pistorio' Gsolden Bull won the Hambleton, feature event of a dreary Monday program.

A crowd of 7000, braving a rainy day at the races, saw Jockey Jack J. Robertson coast the son of Bull Dog home three and a half lengths in advance of E. A. Nicodemus' Laran, the favorite, in the field of five. Six scratches materialized before the event.

Golden Bull, a busy campaigner, was making his twenty-second start of the year and returned a $10.20 mutuel. The 4-year-old colt was clocked in 1:54 1/5 for the mile and a furlong through muck that resembled the bottom of a recently drained canal.

Apprentice Jockey Clarence Picou rode J. Dushock's Mahmoudess to fourth position after Brookmeade Stable's Dart By, his original mount had been scratched.

Picou Wins Fourth

Picou, however, had visited the winner's circle on one occation, winning the fourth race with E. K. Bryson's Our Louise, to the delight of the favorite players who made the combination a $5.40 choice.

Golden Bull and Laran dominated the running of the feature race. Both Robertson on the winner and Carson Kirk aboard Laran rated their charges to the backstretch. When Robertson gave Golden Bull his head, the colt drew out gradually.

Kirk went to work on Laran, but Golden Bull kept moving ahead in the final straightaway and was opening an ever-lengthening gap without apparent effort at the end. Legendra was never a serious factor and was a half dozen lengths behind the place at the finish line.

Claggett Rides Two Winners

With Picou having trouble getting home in front, the program produced a new saddle hero in Herb Claggett, the Florida veteran. Claggett, who hasn't been getting his pick of mounts recently, brought two longshots home.

He won the first race with Glenwood Stable's Heads or Tails at a $37.60 mutuels thus having a hand in the production of a $258.60 payoff on the 9-4 daily double combination. Apprentice George Pappas took the second event with Christiana Stables' Tomke, a $10 proposition.

Claggett's other winner came in the seventh race. By a length margin, he won with W. H. Wilde's Queen of Roses to the satisfaction of her scattered backers who collected a $29 mutuel.

Jockey Charley Givens also rode two winners. He booted G. M. Cohen's Eddie Leonard home in the third race at $5.80, the Airflame colt qualifying nicely for his Thanksgiving Day appearance in the $10,000 added Endurance. Givens came back in the fifth to upset the talent with Watson Elliott's True Dream at $16.40.

Penn State, Army Place 2 On All-East

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Penn State and Army, the East's two most robust football powers, each grabbed a pair of positions today on the all-East eleven selected by the Associated Press after consultations with coaches, scouts and other grid experts.

The Cadets, unbeaten and with only oft-beaten Navy ahead, placed Jim Henry at one guard berth and Bobby Jack Stuart at one of the halfback positions.

Bowl-hungry Penn State, a team that trampled mighty Penn even more decisively than did Army, placed Sam Tamburo at one end and sent along Joseph Drazenovich to play alongside of Henry at guard.

Of the eleven positions on the Eastern all-star aggregation five went to non-Ivy League schools.

The Ivy-clad schools furnished Dale Armstrong of Dartmouth at the other end post; Richard Clark of Cornell, at tackle with Stautner; Charles Bednarik of Pennsylvania, at center; George Sela of Princeton, Lou Kusserow of Columbia and Levi Jackson of Yale in the backfield.

Schulte Red Sox Coach

Boston, Nov. 22 (AP).—Boston Red Sox General Manager Joe Cronin reported tonight Coach Larry Woodall has been made a scout and that his place on the coaching staff will be taken by John Schulte, who was with the New York Yankees last year.

California Goes to Bowl

Jim Aiken said: "We're disappointed we were not selected. I feel that our team would have made a worthy representative. We wish California success."

Aiken declined to comment on the chance of Oregon's playing elsewhere. Harry Myers, Los Angeles American Legion promoter, said he was trying to arrange an Oregon-Oklahoma game December 18 in Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum. PCC Commissioner Schmidt, however, said a special vote of conference members would be necessary to permit Oregon to play in such a game.

The Coast conference, incidentally, has no rule such as the Big Nine which keeps a champion from going to the Rose Bowl in successive years. Southern California and Stanford have been in the Bowl on three consecutive New Years.

This will be California's fifth visit to the big saucer. The Bears beat Ohio State 28-0 in 1921, tied Washington and Jefferson 0-0 in 1922, lost to Georgia Tech 8-7 in 1929, and in their last previous try, whipped Alabama, 13-0, in 1938.

It's Northwestern's initial trip to the Rose Bowl.

'Skins Already Knew About Steve and Tommy

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

National Football League statisticians yesterday made official what the Washington Redskins were pretty well convinced of Sunday—that Runner Steve Van Buren and Passer Tommy Thompson are the loop's greatest offensive duo . . . It was this obnoxious (to the Redskins) pair that gave the Philadelphia Eagles a 42-21 victory and practically sealed the eastern title for '48 . . . Van Buren, on his wide handoffs around the ends, picked up 171 yards in 29 times . . . He's 32 yards ahead of the N.F.L. record pace he set last year, having gained 824 yards in 182 trips with the ball . . . And his lifetime gains of 3637 yards is only 43 yards short of the rushing record held by Green Bay's Clark Hinkle . . . Thompson's 12 completions in 17 passes for 184 yards and three touchdowns brought his season total to 100 complete, 168 attempts, 1388 yards and 18 touchdowns.

LOOKING BACK—Tommy Mont's quarterbacking of the 'Skins at the start of Sunday's game, instead of Sammy Baugh, following the strategy of the last four games . . . His job is to determine the opposition's defense. . . . Two plays, if they'd turned out more favorably for the 'Skins, might have made a huge difference in the outcome . . . (1) With the Eagles leading 14-0, Hugh Taylor took a 30-yard pass from Baugh and tripped as Pass Defender Steele fell over his legs . . . The last 38 yards to a touchdown were clear . . . (2) With the Eagles leading 21-14, the Redskins' Cheverko intercepted a Thompson pass and went 42 yards before running into Teammate Joe Tereshinski at the Eagle 36 . . . A step to the left would have tied the score midway of the third period . . . Dan Sandifer, who spent the afternoon tackling Van Buren, also found time to intercept his twelfth pass of the season and crack the N. F. L. mark set by Baugh in '43 . . . The Redskins failed to use Steve Bagarus, Jim Castiglia and Jimmy Youel, deciding that Bagarus needs more running to get his legs in shape, Fullback Quirk figured to run better against the Eagles than Castiglia, and Youel's quarterbacking wasn't needed.

LOOKING AHEAD — Head Coach Turk Edwards, quite naturally, was in the dumps yesterday as his club boasted only a mathematical chance of the Eastern crown . . . But he expressed confidence of beating the Bears in Chicago this Sunday because "we'll have better blocking and tackling, or I'll know the reason why!" . . . Edwards pointed out that the 'Skins lost by only 17-14 to the Bears in their preseason exhibition in Baltimore, and that it took some fancy point-making for Chicago to win that one . . . All three of the Tribe's last games now figure to be tough, with the Bears, Rams and New York Giants coming up in that order . . . The Giants were Sunday's big surprise with their 59-3 mauling of the Packers.

Muncrief Goes To Pittsburgh

Cleveland, Nov. 22 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians today announced the sale of Bob Muncrief, 32-year-old hurler, to the Pittsburgh Pirates for a sum in excess of the waiver price of $10,000.

A right-hander acquired from the St. Louis Browns late last year, he is the first member to leave the World Champions' fold.

He started last season with an early flash of brilliance in June but was not too effective from then on, winding up with a record of five wins and four losses and an earned run average of 3.98.

Muncrief, who lives in Denison, Tex., spent five years with St. Louis. He won eight and lost 14 in 1947 and won three and lost 12 in 1946.

HQ Leathernecks Win

Alexandria Rink Opens

The Alexandria Arena, a handsome new roller skating drome opening tonight at Montgomery and N. St. Asaph sts in Alexandria will present several exhibitions by national roller stars in honor of the event.

The big item on the opening program will be a one-mile handicap speed competition in which national women's champion Alice Williams will compete.

Reggie Opie, the 19-year-old professional at the new arena, will skate in the exhibitions, together with such nationally known talent as Charlotte and Shirlee Ludwig, Jude Cull, and Rod Hackett.

The floor of the latest America-on-Wheels affiliate will hold 3000 skaters at one time and is covered with a new dustless Miracle plastic.

Black Breaks Harrier Record

East Lansing, Mich., Nov. 22 (AP). Lanky Bob Black, one-man entry from Rhode Island State, shattered a nine-year individual mark today to win the tenth annual NCAA cross-country run from a field of nearly 300 runners.

The 28-year-old speedster covered the 4-mile course in the record-breaking time of 19:52.3 to eclipse the NCAA record of 20:12.9 set by Greg Rice of Notre Dame in 1939.

Michigan State's Spartans won the team championship with 40 points and second-place Wisconsin had 69. Eighteen full teams competed.

Auerbach Trying To Sign Toomey

The Washington Caps, still reaching for the skies, are trying to add six-foot, seven-inch Johnny Toomey, a veteran BAA center, to their roster.

Coach Red Auerbach wired Toomey yesterday at his home in Pomona, California, offering him an immediate tryout with the Caps. Toomey, who did his undergraduate pivoting at the College of the Pacific, is currently a free agent. He has played with Philadelphia, Chicago and Providence in the BAA.

A Four-Man Line

Vandy Knows How to Stop 'T' Attack—Ask Maryland

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 22 (AP).—Has Vanderbilt developed a sure-fire defense against the T-formation?

Exponents of the T-attack say that's practically impossible.

So far, despite a slow start, Coach Henry R. (Red) Sanders' single-wing Commodores have:

Held nine teams, six of them T-models, to 61 points while rolling up 267 markers.

Held their last six opponents, four of them T-outfits, to 14 points while amassing 246 tallies for easy victories.

Blanked Maryland's high-scoring split-T, up to last week one of the top ground gainers in the Nation.

Maryland had averaged 369.3 yards per game up to last Saturday, but got only 69 yards rushing and none by passing against Vanderbilt. Maryland's pass score was 12 attempts, five Vanderbilt interceptions and seven grounded.

Vanderbilt, tenth in the Nation on total defense, with 191 yards yielded up to last Saturday, lopped some 13 yards off their opponents' average in the Maryland game.

What's the secret of this defensive record?

Sanders thinks it's a new wrinkle—a basic four-man line—combined with a two-unit idea which is not new. The two-unit plan is Sanders' answer to the two-team system used by many larger schools. It calls for eight players to work in units of four each.

Here's how it works:

One unit includes the end, tackle, guard and fullback. The other is made up of the guard, tackle, end and center. The fullback and center are defensive captains. Each gives a defensive signal and one unit doesn't have to know the other's signal. The defensive center, however, is the over-all captain and may "off" any signal given by the fullback.

From this basic setup, the Commodores evolve 26 defensive combinations, including a two-deep, four-man line, and five, six, seven and eight-man lines. These are varied further by different type charges—slant, loop and slide.

Sometimes, because T-teams often check signals after getting a look at the defense, the Commodores move to their prearranged defensive setup after the ball is snapped.

Sanders thinks "we may be the only college team in the country using a four-man line extensively, but don't have anything sensational."

He added:

"We feel our defenses are sound but not sufficient to supply the difference when outmanned."

Wilson's 'Swiggard' Just Wasn't Lucky

By Whitney Martin

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Offhand we would say that the only thing really unusual about the Jack Talbert case is that he got caught.

Jack Talbert is the Washington, D. C., boy who was graduated from one high school, then enrolled in another to complete his football education. He was caught and confessed the masquerade after some of his former teammates against whom he was playing thought he looked familiar.

Talbert at least was half honest. When he switched schools for his post-graduate work he kept half his right name. He called himself Jack Swiggard. He kept the Jack, in other words, something everybody would like to do nowadays.

Anyway, down through the years there have been countless Talbert incidents. Many of them never are uncovered, and others finally are disclosed years afterward when it is too late to do anything about them.

Recalls Tramp Athletes

Tramp athletes are more or less a thing of the past, but in the days when colleges weren't too particular about the personnel of their football squads and didn't pry too deeply into the pasts of the applicants a lad could do quite well for himself by switching allegiance.

As long as he glanced down at the letter on his sweater now and then and recalled which school he happened to be playing for at the moment, everything was all right.

In most instances there had to be a little conniving on the part of the coach, or he at least had to close his eyes tightly so he wouldn't know what was going on around him. If, while his eyes were closed, some kid who had joined the squad that day, and who hadn't yet found his way to a classroom ran for a touchdown, was he to blame?

From a reliable source we heard of one incident involving a prep school in Idaho. One of its players had an older brother who played for another high school, which had finished its season when the younger brother's school was getting set for its big game.

"Mask-erade"

The older brother was bigger, and a much better football player, so when the day of the big game arrived there was great consternation among the opponents when the supposedly inoffensive younger brother went out there and punted and passed and ran with the ball, and generally behaved like a one-man team.

The boy had entered the game with his face covered with adhesive tape. The result of a rap on the nose, no doubt. Anyway, late in the game he faked an injury and was carried to the bench, where he was the hidden center of a huddle.

Somehow in this huddle the adhesive tape mysteriously became detached from his face, and just as mysteriously it appeared on the face of his brother. The maimed warrior was smuggled off the field, while the younger brother, who hadn't played a minute, sat there in plastered glory.

In the colleges today too much publicity is given the better players to permit them to transfer allegiance at will, and the schools are much, much tougher when it comes to scholastic requirements. The freshman rule at the larger colleges also discourages impromptu transfers.

But in the high schools it still apparently is being done. We just heard of the Talbert case because he was caught, that's all.

This Should Teach You About Coaches

By Sterling Slappey

Atlanta, Nov. 22 (AP).—Do you pay any attention to a tear-jerking football coach and his weekly pregame dirge?

You do? Well, hello sucker.

"I'll be satisfied to win by a single point," said Notre Dame's Frank Leahy before the Pittsburgh game. The score: Notre Dame, 40; Pitt, 0.

Johnny Vaught of Mississippi, had this to say before the LSU game, "I'm scared." The score: Mississippi 49, LSU 19.

Coach Jim Gill, an assistant at North Carolina, said the Tar Heels could beat Texas only if they played over their heads 25 per cent. He added: "Those Texans are just about as fast as a greased streak of lightening." The score: North Carolina 34, Greased Lightening 7.

The California-Navy game was a "blind date" as far as Lynn Waldorf of Cal was concerned. California took an eye-opening 21-7 victory.

Two other coaches varied their pregame comments to this extent:

"I think we're going to win," said George Sauer of Navy. The Middies lost, 13-0, two days later to Columbia. Jim Tatum of Maryland said he was a little afraid of his defense against Vanderbilt. Tatum's comment was timely as Vandy won, 34-0.

At least one coach, Bud DeGroot of West Virginia paid for pessimism. Assistant Coach Bob Titchenal said DeGroot bet every member of the team a new shirt and tie they would not score 25 points against Ohio University. The Mountaineers scored 43.

Clemson's Mathews Catches Justice In Scoring Race

Richmond, Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—At long last, somebody has overhauled North Carolina's Charlie Justice when the Choo-Choo had a head start.

Ray Mathews, Clemson halfback, today had pulled into a deadlock with Justice for individual point-making honors in the Southern Conference.

Mathews and Justice each had nine touchdowns to their credit for 54 points. The Clemson ace, though, had played in only eight tilts while Justice had appeared in nine.

Any resemblance to your best customers is inevitable

A short time ago, TIME wrote to a cross section of subscribers, asked them to sit for a "TIME Exposure" by mail to give us a clearer picture of the many things we, and the advertising world, already know about the 1,500,000 families who read TIME.

In keeping with the "picture" theme of the mailing, we threw in this last question just for fun: "How about enclosing a snapshot of yourself, hmmm?"

The average TIME man owns 4 business suits, 2 sports jackets, 6.4 pairs of shoes.

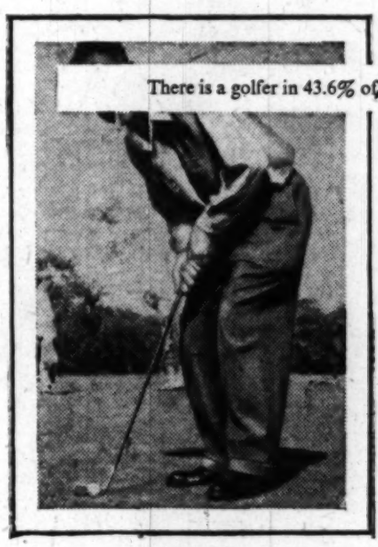
A little more critical of his shirts than our average, this TIME man sends 6 shirts to the ragbag every year.

In selecting gifts for the "women in their life," TIME men picked flowers on 1,193,000 occasions; candy—1,043,000 times; clothing—518,000 times; jewelry—483,000 times; lingerie—336,000 times; perfume—218,000 times.



There is a golfer in 43.6% of TIME families. The usual score is 99. But 3.7% of TIME men go around in the 70's—and 10.7% tear up their score card.

This guy shoots in the 80's. He bought 12 new balls in 1947—one more than par for all of TIME's golfing readers.

Hobbies of TIME-reading men take in all of the obvious—fishing, hunting, etc. . . . and also some not so usual such as politics, horse racing, mine prospecting and interior decorating. They spend $253 and about 41 days a year working at it.

This gentleman's No. 1 hobby is "just living." He spends 365 days a year at it.

TIME families spend about $44,300,000 every week for groceries (including vegetables, fruit, meat, dairy products, etc.). Food bills in the average TIME household run to $30 per week (national average $22.98). But close to 500,000 TIME families spend between $25 and $39 each.

Nine out of ten dresses purchased by TIME women last year were "new look" styles. 13% said hubby was there when the purchases were made.

Aside from an awareness of what's cooking in the news, TIME women know what's cooking in the kitchen. 92.5% own cookbooks—the average per family is 4.7 cookbooks.

More than 600,000 TIME readers traveled by air in 1947. The grand total comes to 3,422,000 trips . . . or 3,050,000,000 miles.

The facts shown above are reported by TIME subscribers (who comprise 80% of TIME's circulation).

These are the kinds of people who have attracted so many advertisers of such standing that TIME ranks fourth among all U.S. magazines in advertising revenue for the first 9 months of 1948.

The complete published report—containing hundreds more facts about the living and buying habits of TIME readers—will soon be available. Write to David Wallace, TIME's Research Director, 9 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, N. Y.

Bond-Jumper Kept on Jump Below Border

By Joseph Paull

Take a svelte blonde with a yearning for adventure, put her in Mexico City, and anything can happen.

It apparently all did happen to Miss Deejaen (pronounced dayjun) Bacon, 25-year-old Washingtonian, whose travels were prompted by a sudden aversion for courts.

By the time her nine-month jaunt ended, Miss Bacon had been aboard a Mexican presidential yacht, in two jails, stranded in a shark-infested bay, slumming in a bawdy house, speckled with silver in an explosion, awarded a bachelor of arts degree and falsely branded as both a German and Russian spy.

1947 Forgery Charge

Back in 1947, Miss Bacon was charged here with forging checks worth $9574 to the account of C. N. Shelton, aviator for the Chinese government. She claimed she had authority to sign the checks but nevertheless jumped her $3000 bond.

Only last month she learned her flight from prosecution was—except for its laughs and thrills—useless. She was extradited to this country in July. On October 1, the United States Attorney dismissed most of the charges in District Court here and Judge Matthew F. McGuire put her on probation.

But when Deejaen left here for Mexico in October, 1947, she didn't believe she would be so fortunate.

At the El Paso airplane terminal, she first felt the fear of being pursued, she related.

Name Blared Out

A loud speaker there blared out her name. She said she could feel the breath of the FBI, but it turned out to be only a message that a friend was wiring her funds.

She took the next plane and in Mexico City, installed herself in a room at the exclusive Reforma Hotel, took a bath and then went to see the sights.

"It seemed that everywhere I went, there were people who left the States to avoid embarrassment and trouble," she said.

Someone thought her talents could be used to run a silver factory, but Deejaen lacked a sufficient knowledge of Spanish. So, she became a student for three months, when, she said, she made 96 on her exams and for a price was given her sheepskin.

On her next visit to the silver factory, there was an explosion, she said. It took two weeks for physicians in a hospital to get the silver particles out of her back.

Next came Acapulco.

Met Movie Figures

She lived in a bathing suit, gained 15 pounds and a deep tan, and met Tyrone Power, John Wayne, John Ford and Ken Hopkins, she recalls.

One night she and some other persons took a bottle of liquor into a night club, seeking to avoid a corkage fee. Soon, a little man in a fancy uniform told them that their act was against the law. They spent three hours in an open air jail filled with lice and people before being bailed out.

A few days later, she spent an afternoon by invitation aboard President Aleman's yacht, Sotavento, she says.

On another occasion, when her men friends refused to take her, Deejaen and a girl companion decided to row out in the bay to a floating night club. Half way out, the rowboat began leaking and the girls began screaming.

A launch was sent out from the ship to the rescue. As the girls stepped aboard the night club, their rowboat turned over and sank.

Then later, for more adventure, Deejaen decided to visit a bawdy-house.

"I went with male escorts, of course."

Is Taken for a Spy

Soon after she was arrested for the bad checks.

She cursed out her jailer in Russian—of which she knows a few dozen words, and the newspapers headlined, "Blonde Russian Spy Captured."

A policeman noticed that among her effects was a book autographed by Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, accused former Bundist, and the newspaper said "Blonde Russian Spy Revealed."

"Thank goodness, the authorities sent me back to good old Uncle Sam's country!" she said.

U. S. Allays China's Fears of Yak Tail Intrigue Over Tibet

By the United Press

The United States has just about satisfied China that there was nothing behind those false beards that the five gentlemen from Tibet sought to sell here last summer.

The United States in general was far too captivated by the fact that the delegation sought to promote sale of yak tails, from which the finest, curly, white Santa Claus beards are made, to pay much attention to possible political complications.

But the State Department, which does not believe in Santa Claus, at least not without congressional approval, kept one ear cocked toward Nanking, and one eye on the activities of the five silken-robed emissaries from the court of the Dalai Lama.

China has long maintained a polite fiction of sovereignty over Tibet, despite the fact that Nanking's authority has little or no weight in that land. The United States always has recognized China's somewhat shaky claim, although other nations, notably Great Britain, deal directly with Lhasa, the Tibetan capital.

From the row kicked up in Nanking, it became apparent that Chinese authorities feared the trade mission might be seeking formal American recognition of Tibetan autonomy. A high official here yesterday admitted that it "took some fine working to keep the peace" whilst the Tibetans dallied in the Nation's Capital.

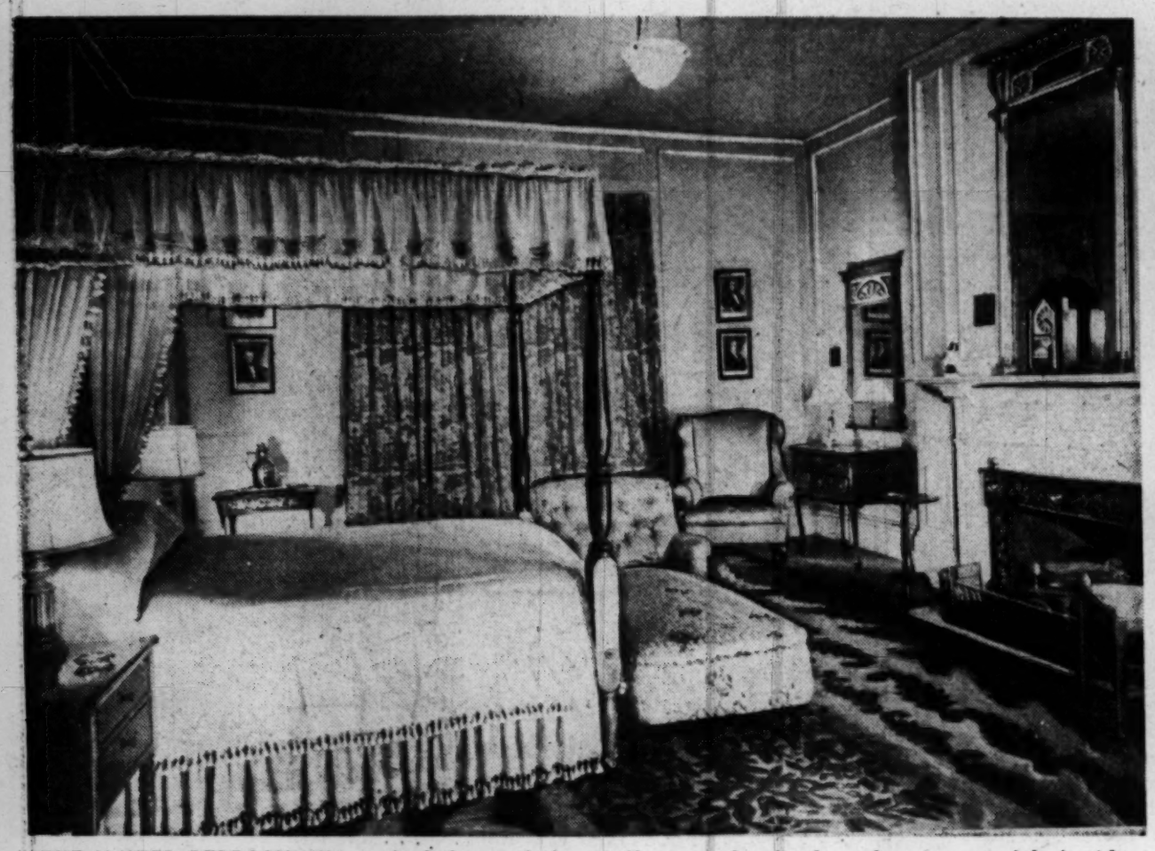
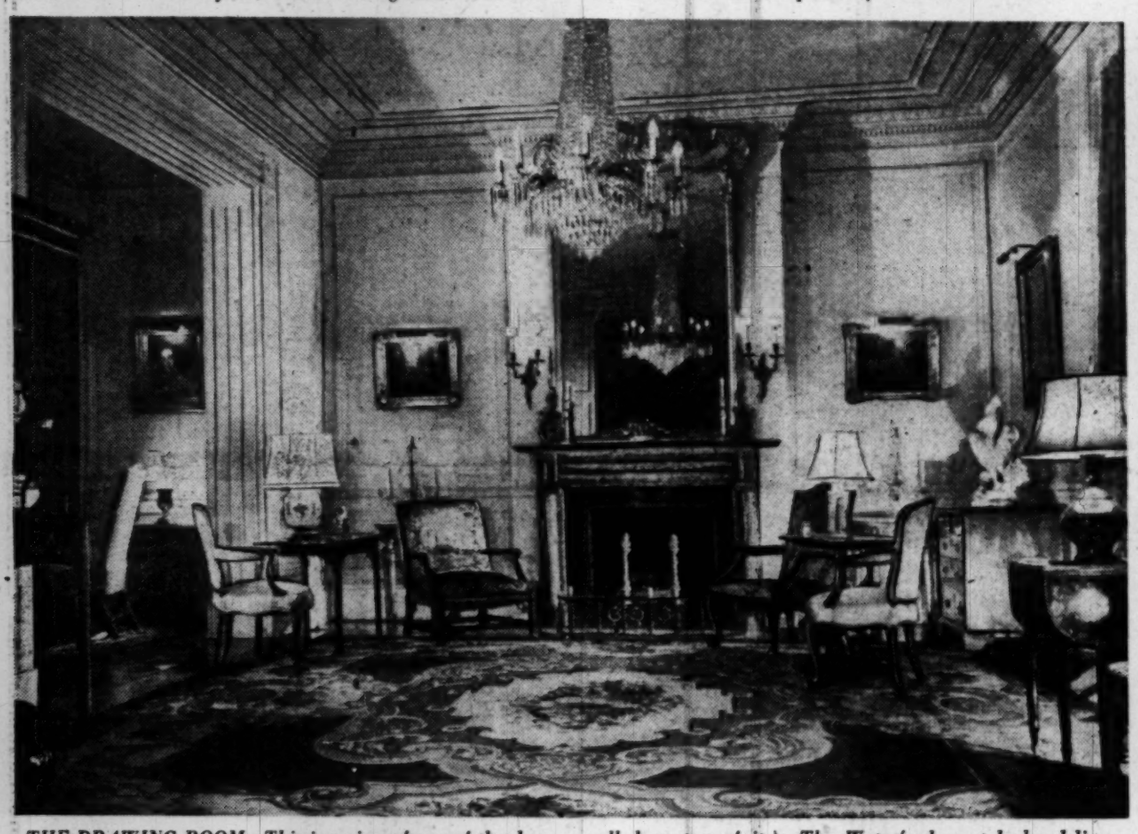
WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1948

Historic Blair House—New Home of the Nation's First Family



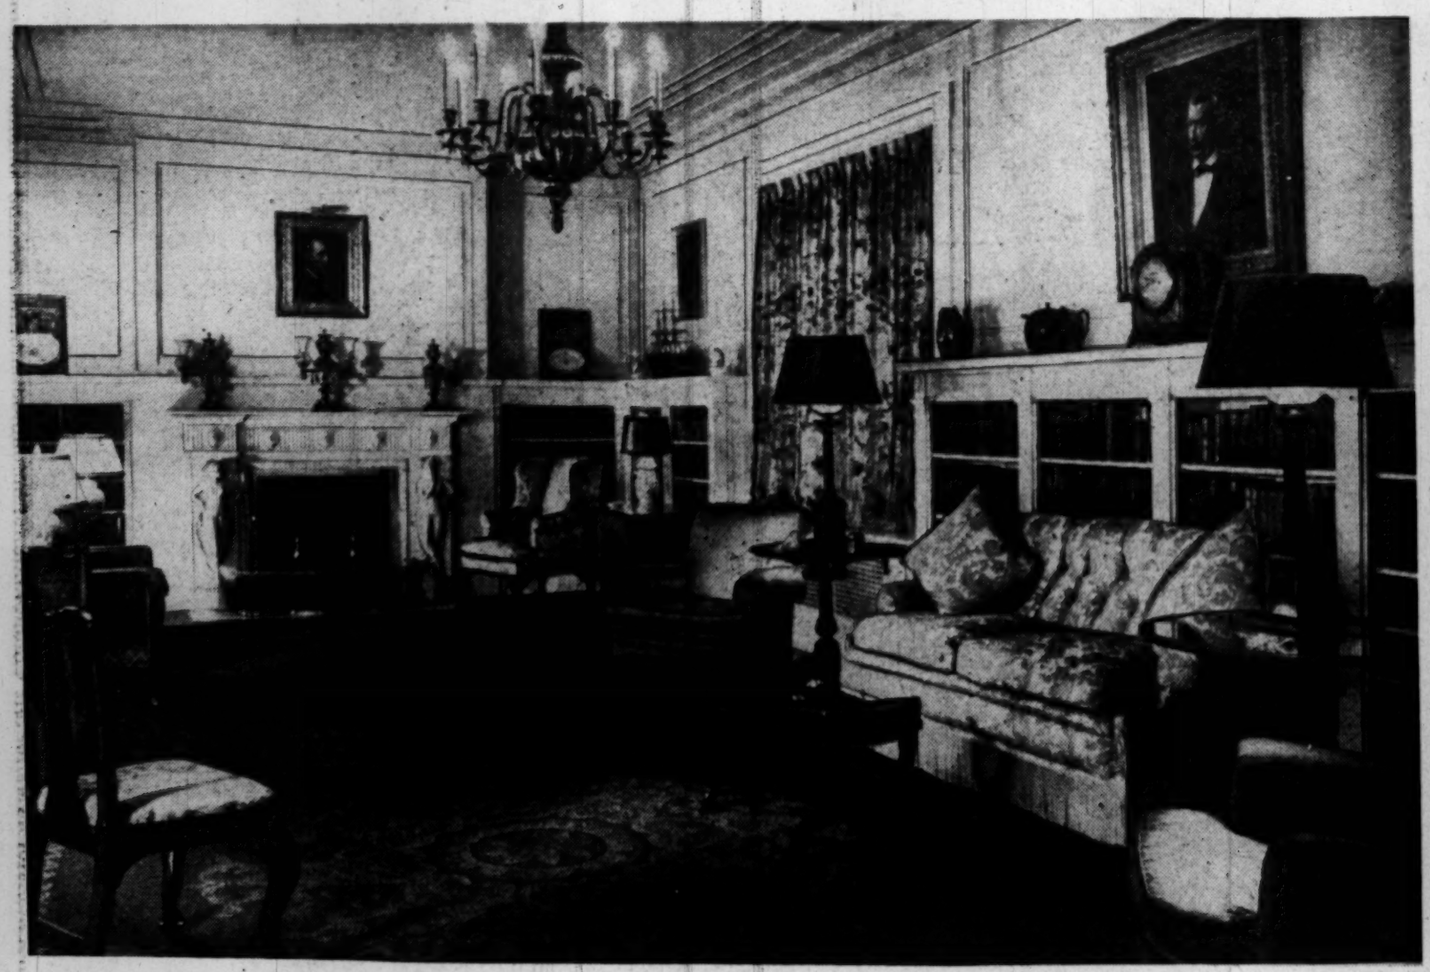
THE MASTER BEDROOM—This is the bedroom which was occupied by the ranking guest of most visiting delegations and probably will be President Truman's bedroom. It opens into the library. All the furniture is typically American. The lowboy serves as a dressing table. The bed is Sheraton and is of curly maple, as are most of the furnishings of this room. The mirror is gilt and is of the Early Federal period. The American steeple clock on the mantel has counterparts today in most antique shops. On the walls are Currier & Ives prints of American Presidents

THE DINING ROOM—On the delicately inlaid and veneered Hepplewhite sideboard are Sheffield candelabra and a large Lowestoft tureen. The beautiful chandelier above the pedestal dining table is of Waterford glass. The chairs are splat-back Chippendale. The emerald-green decanters on the mantel strike a brilliant note of color. A display room upstairs has other examples of this glass. The six-fold Chinese leather screen hides the door to the butler's pantry. The carved wood mantel . . . Circa 1801 . . . was brought down from Maine

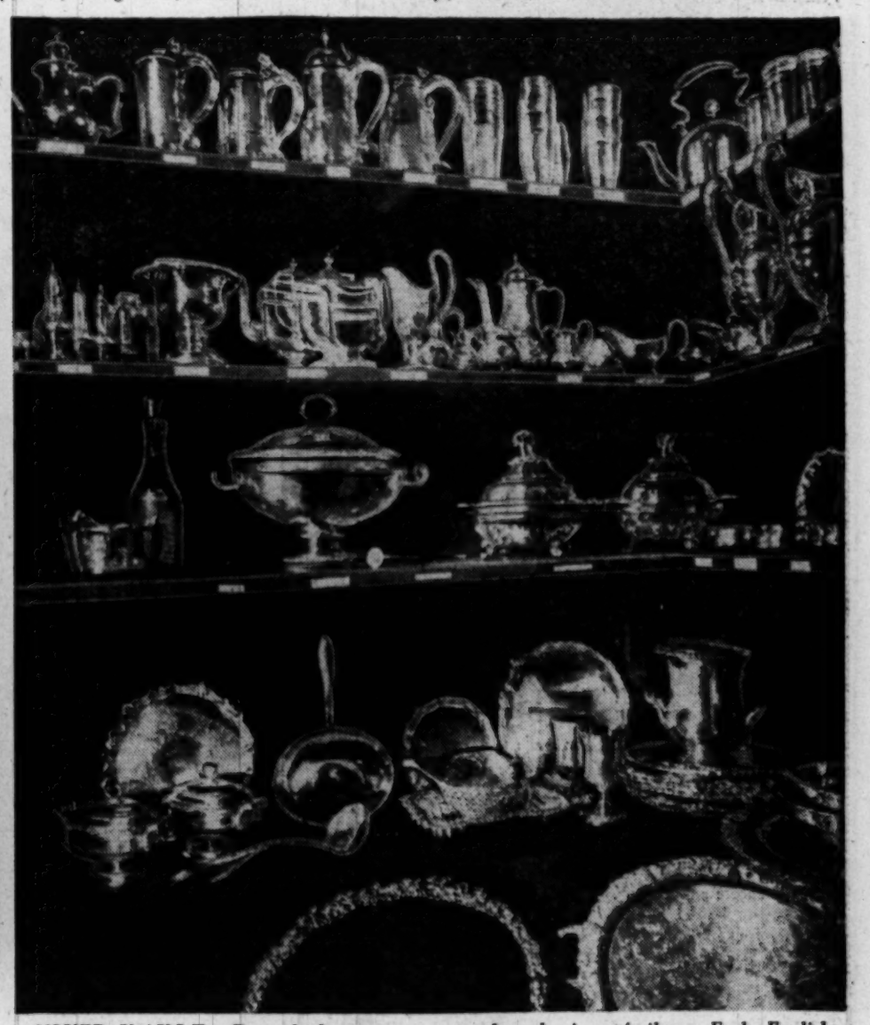


THE DRAWING ROOM—This is a view of one of the double parlors typical of houses of their time. All of the furniture seen is Eighteenth Century. The delicately colored Aubusson rug has mellowed to shades of dull red, blue and beige. (The rug is protected during large receptions by rugs rolled on top of it.) The Waterford crystal chandeliers take an entire day to clean. The candlesticks are Battersea. This room is the happy combination of the best in periods of French, English and American furniture. Chinese porcelains have been converted into beautiful and useful lamps

ANOTHER BEDROOM—A massive bedstead with twisted posts dominates this room. The lower posts only are carved as was usual, since the draperies at the head of the bed always concealed the upper posts (Circa 1800). The American Tambour Sheraton desk (center, background) is about the same date. In the corner is a chest-on-stand with a Federal gilt mirror over it. The armchair is English Chippendale, as is the desk chair. The corner basin stand is mahogany, of the Federal period. In the drawing room (pictured at left) General Sherman was married



THE LIBRARY—This large, cheerful room opens off the master bedroom, which in all probability President Truman will use as his sitting room and study. As evident in the picture, there are several modern as well as Eighteenth Century pieces. Demanding attention is the red Savonnerie carpet, which covers the entire floor. In this room are the Blair law books and other volumes of family interest, including many on china, silver and furniture. The mantel, brought from Italy, is of marble with draped female figures in high relief, not in keeping with the restrained beauty of the other mantels in the house. There is a splendid portrait of Lincoln over the fireplace, and on the side wall are portraits of Jackson, Washington, and one of the Blairs. The Empire bronze garniture of Argand lamps on the mantel have glass shades and lusters. This room illustrates no period—it is Blair at its most varied, with the kind of furnishings any family of means and good taste might assemble



SILVER VAULT—Beyond the pantry (which is filled with china the Blairs once used, including an enormous set of Oriental export porcelain), is this silver vault. Mrs. Victoria Geaney, the hostess-housekeeper, has herself marked each piece as to period and design on small white cards placed beneath each piece of silver. Early English silver, much of it pre-Revolutionary, is kept in this special vault. A Paul Revere tankard three-pronged forks and pistol-handled knives are among the most noteworthy pieces. Though each piece is museum-worthy, this silver is used for guests

For the first time since the elections, the First Lady and her daughter were honor guests at a major social event. Cabinet ladies and wives of Ambassadors were among those who attended the tea given for Mrs. Truman and her daughter by the Women's National Press Club.

Also, Mrs. Kenneth Royall, wife of the Secretary of the Army; Mrs. John Steelman, wife of the Assistant to the President.

ANOTHER party on Miss Margaret Truman's calendar yesterday was a luncheon she gave at Blair House for Miss Jeanne Miles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Miles, whose marriage to Robert Hollingshead, jr., will take place Saturday evening at St. Alban's Church. Miss Truman and Miss Miles were classmates at Gunston Hall School.

Members of the wedding party who were guests were Miss Nell Hackney, who will be maid of honor, and bridesmaids Miss Helen Malone, Mrs. John D. Meana, Mrs. Dwight Martin and Miss Martha Hollingshead, sister of the prospective bridegroom.

Other guests were Mrs. Churchill Elmore, Miss Jane Lingo, Miss Mary Ogden, former Gunston Hall students; Miss Drucie Snyder and Miss Virginia Irvine.

A GALA RECEPTION was held yesterday in the Continental Room of the Wardman Park Hotel in celebration of the independence of Lebanon. In the absence of the minister, Charles Malik, who is attending the U. N. conference in Paris, the Charge d'Affaires, George Hakim, was host.

Miss Angela N. M. Jurdak, attache at the legation, assisted Mr. Hakim in receiving the guests. Bronze and white chrysanthemums and candles centered long buffet tables from which hors d'oeuvres and a light buffet were served.

Guests included Acting Secretary of State and Mrs. Robert A. Lovett and the Secretary of War and Mrs. Kenneth Royall. All chiefs of missions were invited as well members of residential society. Around 400 attended the important function.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Fifteen Years Ago Wife Sinned Against Husband Who Has Subjugated Her With Fearsome Recrimination Since; What Now?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Years ago I did my husband a great injury. He could have divorced me if he chose, but he said he would forgive me and we would stay together to make a home for our children, who were quite young then. But he hasn't forgiven me at all in the 15 years since; he brings up the wretched past at every turn.

I admit my wrong-doing, but will say in extenuation that it probably wouldn't have happened if Dick had been a kinder, more tender husband. He is a good man but his temper is sometimes violent and his behavior harsh. Things are black or white to him, and usually I am very black.

No amount of hard work I do—washing, ironing, cooking, cleaning, in a household of five—seems enough to please him. Always there is something I've failed to do or should have done better; and we have no social life, because you can't invite people to your home when a tirade may break out any minute.

I AM NOT naturally meek; I must voice an opinion occasionally, although knowing full well I court disaster in doing so, because hours of bitter denunciation may ensue if I differ mildly from his views. And he tells all sorts of people how he was wronged years ago.

The children are grown, and all are fine persons, I think. The eldest is gone—to get as far as possible from us, I feel—and the others will be gone before long. As for me, I can support myself in a modest way, as I earn some money now and could earn more; and I long to pull up stakes and escape, but it doesn't seem fair while the children are here; yet in another five years I may feel too worn to make the break.

So what to do? The flesh as well as the spirit rebels at the prospect of more years ahead like those behind. But if nothing can be done about the situation, how can I live with it or rise above it? What can I tell myself to make it tolerable? The past is irrevocable; I can't change it, much as I wish I could. There is only the future to work with, and I doubt that I'll have the courage to face it. Can you help me? P. L.

DEAR P. L.: Your sin, I gather, had to do with transient infidelity; but how much worse, by Christian standards, is Dick's vindictive unforgiveness of it—through all the years you've been anxiously expiating the transgression.

In His ministry, Jesus took care to illustrate that Dick's sort of sin is more wicked than yours—as witness His compassionate absolution granted the woman taken in adultery, and His grave indictment of the Pharisee's haughty assumption of virtuous superiority to the contrite self-confessed sinner who stood afar off from the altar and prayed, "God, be merciful to me——."

So much for the religious slant, which definitely finds Dick in the Pharisee's shoes, when indeed he ought to be on his knees, suing God's help in purging his soul of the sadistic hate he has viciously visited on you for many years. Which brings us to the psychological significance of "what gives."

DICK'S relentless efforts to keep alive, in your mind and the public consciousness, a conviction that you "wronged" him, have their origin in self-detestation; and from this hate-nucleus in his personality a sadistic pattern of tyranny has evolved, the aim of which is to compel your allegiance and thereby secure for himself some bulwark against loneliness.

Unconsciously he feels unfit, and certainly knows not how, to establish positive love-relatedness; but he dare not face this truth and to divert suspicion from it, in his own and others' minds, he elected instinctively to advertise and crucify you as the alleged instigator of martial misery from start to finish—and this face-saving campaign of his became "a natural" on the surface, after he had harried and driven you to one wretched "compromising" instance of rebellion.

Thus you owe Dick no expiation; you never have. You've been far more sinned against than sinning, in bondage to him. The wrong you've done has been to yourself, in submitting to his neurotic reign of torture. So, for advice, "Know the truth and the truth shall make you free"—to go or stay, just as you please. But in either case, don't bow down to his psychotic recriminations any longer. Stand up to him with the certain knowledge that God, and all right minds, are on your side. M. H.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Collection Galore

Parents of youngsters from around 6 or 7 years of age up to the 'teens can expect them to clutter up the place with all sorts of collections. Girls go in for paper dolls, pictures of movie stars, and bits of cloth. Boys collect match covers, pictures of baseball players, rocks, marbles, and many other kinds of things. Indeed, the things mentioned are but a very few of the dozens of "gimcracks" that the young may treasure.

Grownups often feel that such collections are nothing but a nuisance and find it hard to understand why children should want to collect such "junk." They may even discourage collecting activity or limit the amount a youngster may have.

To the child, though, his collections are most important. In addition to the feeling of owning something important, they bring him admiration from his playmates. Psychologists have pointed out, too, that such collections may indicate the building of a scientific spirit.

So bear with your collecting children. Go so far as to show some interest. You may even find yourself getting excited about a match cover that is different from any that the other junior collectors have.

Alas for Abells

Gone Are the Days... Cigarettes No Longer Buy Castles in Munich

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

QUITE the gayest news emerging from European depths is dispatched by Jane Abell whose husband, George, is heading press activities in Munich. Assigned, or rather billeted, in what was reputed to be a handsomely furnished house, they arrived to find it picked clean except for a few bits of uncomfortably overstuffed furniture. The Army called in to remedy the crisis, promised adequate replacements.

"Sunday morning," writes Mrs. A., when a huge van rolled up, I oh-ed and ah-ed in anticipatory delight. Then the drivers deposited four iron cots with straw-like mattresses, chipped bathroom mirror, I enameled pitcher and 1 rolling pin."

With this nucleous tastefuly arranged, Jane proceeded to scavenge the neighborhood, looting here and there with considerable adroitness. Now, her mansion's a screwball's dream—her bedroom walls are dark blue, the ceiling striped dusty pink and white, the sitting room done up in cocoa brown with the looted furniture in chartreuse.

So impressed were the local magazines that she was immediately invited to author a series of articles on how to "make-do," but Mrs. Abell adds, "I didn't dare write about my nonhouse beautiful for fear they'd think my screwball ideas were typically American."

In addition to furnishings, she has assembled a staff of servants, including a Czech refugee cook, a former house painter as chauffeur and a former governess who does mending and such. Since all these, plus a few other helpers, are suffering from malnutrition, Jane Abell finds it hard to make ends "meat" with a monthly commissary allowance of $11. "Alas," she moans, "gone are the days when a castle could be bought with a carton of cigarettes!"

One touch of Washingtonia crept into her epistle—among some papers she found a letter from the late Mrs. Eleanor Patterson—"Your double Victorian bed is waiting for you in storage, darlings." Installed on Army cots, the Abells are quite possibly the only Patterson legatees completely uninterested in legal complications!

How to Stick a Map to a Concrete Wall

Can you tell me how best to attach a large map to a concrete plaster-covered wall? We have unsuccessfully tried transparent tape but it soon dries and peels off. We are now using adhesive tape, which adheres well, but is most unattractive. R. S. M.

Since the adhesive tape adheres well, you could make it less noticeable by coloring it with crayons to match or blend with the map. Another suggestion would be to stick the map to the wall with glue or the black adhesive which comes in a tube and is sold at dime and hardware stores. This method, however, might leave a spot on the wall while the adhesive tape would not.

I have a set of made-to-order slip covers of excellent quality with a flowered pattern which has begun to look dull and faded. I have had them cleaned several times. Would you recommend having them dyed? If so, what color? The room carpet is dark blue with a white flower overtone. P. J. M.

Dyeing will freshen the slip covers, but to completely cover the designs, it will be necessary to use a dark dye. Perhaps you could dye them to match the dark blue in the rug. You could use a lighter dye by first removing the design with dye remover sold where dyes are sold, but this is considerable trouble.

I'm writing to ask you if you could recommend a good cleaner for bronze and copper objects that have turned almost black? They should shine like a new penny, but I've been unable to find the right cleaner. T. H. K.

Salt and vinegar is a good copper and bronze cleaner if rubbed on with a soft cloth. When polished, wash the article thoroughly with mild soap and water and polish dry. There are on the market pastes and creams which are very effective for cleaning metals. Then, too, there are cloths which are especially treated to do the job. All of these products can be purchased in the housewares departments of department and hardware stores.

Sometime ago, I washed a brown knitted dress of nubby wool in lukewarm soap suds. When dry, the skirt had large white spots on it. I've washed it and rinsed it thoroughly three or four more times and the spots are still in the skirt. They are not on the reverse (pure) side of the knitting. Could you advise a possible way to remove these spots? J. W. C.

My only suggestion would be to dye the dress a dark brown. Follow the directions which come with the dye you use.

I would like to have an informal party the evening after my baby is christened. I plan to have a christening cake and serve champagne. Could you tell me something else to serve that wouldn't be too expensive and require too much time to prepare that would go along well with that? Would also like to know what sort of entertainment would be appropriate on this occasion. S. J. C.

You could serve canapes or tiny, open-faced sandwiches with the cake and champagne. These could be prepared the day before the party and stored between layers of waxed paper in a box in the refrigerator. Placing a damp cloth over the top sheet of waxed paper will also help to keep them moist.

A christening party is quite like a tea where no special entertainment is provided other than drinking to the health and success of the baby.

I shellacked my 6-month-old floors (the stain had been taken off with a caustic used to remove stubborn spots) and the finish is cracking and showing heel marks after only a few days' wear. What can be done to prevent this in redoing the floors once more? L. C.

The shellac may have been applied too thinly. Shellac should be thinned with good quality denatured alcohol in the proportion of three parts of shellac to two parts of alcohol, or equal parts of alcohol and shellac. Your trouble might also have been caused by the use of shellac which was not fresh. Shellac which is more than 6 months old will deteriorate so that it does not harden. In redoing the floors be sure all the old shellac is completely removed. Sanding the floor is the best preparation for shellacking. Be sure to use a good quality of fresh shellac and apply it in the right consistency.

I have an old black lapin fur coat which is in good condition except for the fading of the dye in places. I would like to cut it up and make muffs and bonnets for my small nieces, but would rather have the fur made white. Is it possible to bleach it? Would the expense of having a furrier do the job be worth more than the trouble? V. L. M.

A furrier advises me that this fur could not be successfully bleached and that he does not know of a furrier who would attempt such a job.

WHEN the weather's cold and crisp, it's time for a savory pork roast, served with a casserole of sweet potatoes and marshmallows. A cushion style pork shoulder is a good cut to use for this purpose

Have a square roomy pocket cut in it and fill it with your favorite stuffing. Rub the cavity with salt and pepper first, then spoon in about four cups of stuffing. Sew or skewer the open sides of the cavity, then place the roast on a rack in an open roasting pan with its fat surface uppermost. Roast in a moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit, allowing 35 to 40 minutes per pound

A green vegetable and an apple salad are good accompaniments for the pork and sweet potatoes. For dessert, have fresh grapes if you like a light ending for the meal, or mince meat pie if you want something heartier

Women Voters Visit Three District Schools

Approximately 50 members of the D. C. League of Women Voters visited a number of schools in the District yesterday in the third of a series of "go see" tours to Washington institutions.

League members were divided into four groups, each of which visited three schools chosen to demonstrate special types of instruction. Each group also visited a school where overcrowded conditions prevail.

After the morning's tours the four groups met with Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, and Miss Margaret Pepper, administrative assistant to the superintendent of schools, at the YWCA for a luncheon discussion on school facilities.

Leaders of the four tours were Mrs. Monroe Burke, Mrs. William H. Wolowitz, Mrs. Elbridge Sibley and Mrs. Isidore Rodis.

How young should people Marry?

The Joslins married on little else than a firm faith that they could make a future for themselves.

When the Frank R. Joslins of Bedford, Massachusetts, were married twenty years ago, he had just started his first job; Mrs. Joslin, too, was just out of college. But at the age of 21 both were sure that whatever came they could take it right in their stride.

During depression years Frank had to take what jobs he could find to support his wife and baby. But tough as things were, the young Joslins never lost courage, nor sight of their goals!

Frank today is assistant construction manager with a public utility company. He recently completed a course in advanced management at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

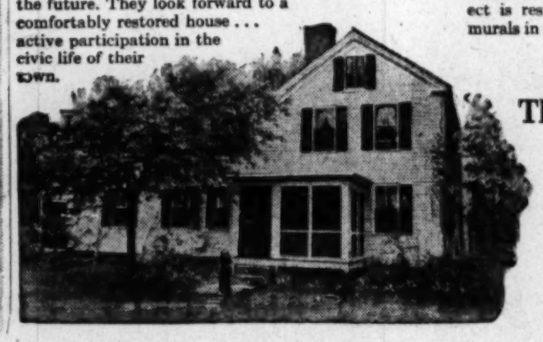
Sons Dick, 18, and Bob, 14, follow parents' example, make their own way. After-school jobs provide money for camp. Dick will help finance college by summer work. They painted the house!

At school last year, Dick was on the track squad and was president of the student assembly committee. Today he has his heart set on taking a course in business administration at Dartmouth College.

The older girls help care for twins Judy and Joanne, 3½. No money spent for "sitters" at the Joslins! Nancy is 16, Patricia, 8. With brothers, they ran house when mother was ill.

The 150-year-old New England homestead the Joslins bought in 1947 is being restored by the family all on their own.

In spite of the uncertainties everyone faces today, the Joslins are planning for the future. They look forward to a comfortably restored house . . . active participation in the civic life of their town.



Today the six Joslin children are well on the way to being the kind of citizens this country needs. Church is part of their well-rounded life. Nancy sings in the choir; Dick is chaplain of a church-connected youth group.

By their way of taking both the rough spots and the smooth spots life hands out to everyone, the Joslins show that they were right to marry as young as they did.

Part of the family security Mr. Joslin has provided comes from the program of life insurance he planned with the help of his life insurance agent. Now he's planning to build larger retirement income when he can.

THE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES AND THEIR AGENTS

BRING YOU THIS STORY BECAUSE... families like the Joslins show us one way that happiness is earned! You, yourself, probably know a family, right in your own town, that is getting ahead in the same typically American way. Such families prove to all of us that we can solve our own problems by our own efforts....Their example shows, too, why it is so important for us to hold to our rights to think for ourselves, to work at what we like, to live as we choose. For what this country amounts to depends upon what happens to its homes!

Club Women Hear Talk on Indonesia

N. A. C. Slotemaker de Bruine, counselor of the Netherlands Embassy, spoke on "Nationalism and Communism in Indonesia" before members of the Women's National Democratic Club at a luncheon meeting yesterday.

Good nationalism should be encouraged everywhere especially in Indonesia, Mr. Slotemaker said. That is what the Netherlands is endeavoring to do, he continued, in order to have the United States of Indonesia established in the spring of 1949.

Mr. Slotemaker was introduced by Mrs. Norman Littel, program chairman. Mrs. J. Borden Harriman presided at the meeting.

5-Mile Chase Traps Soldier In an Alley

An armed Fort Myer soldier in a stolen car was chased five miles through city streets at 5 a. m. yesterday and finally caught in an alley near 14th and N sts. nw.

Police Pvts. George Eppard and James C. Teague said they started chasing Army Pvt. James A. Jukes, 21, in their scout car at 30th st. and Bladensburg rd. ne., when they saw him speeding. They nearly caught him at New York and Florida aves. ne. when he stopped for a red light but he got away at 70 miles an hour, they said.

Jukes finally stopped the car near Thomas Circle and fled on foot into an alley. Eppard, forgetting he had loosened a shoestring for comfort, lost a shoe as he ran after Jukes. The policeman said Jukes had a .38-caliber revolver and the car he was driving had been stolen from in front of the home of its owner, Matthew B. Thorpe, 1527 33d st. nw., last Friday. Jukes was on a weekend pass.

Police said Jukes would be charged with unauthorized use of an automobile, carrying a concealed weapon and several traffic violations.

"No matter how the weather changes before morning, my electric cover sees that I'm not too warm but just right. And it does away with heavy bulky weight. So I win every way.

One on the Aisle—

Noel Cuts Loose At Stage Unions

By Richard L. Coe

NOEL COWARD'S "Peace in Our Time," which has not been produced in America, has just been published by Doubleday.

In this play the assured Noel tackles that exercise you may recall from schoolday assignmnets on, "If Booth Had Missed." His what-would-have-happened-if thesis is a picture of England under the Nazis, an England redeemed by a thumping liberation through Allied and underground exertions.

But what makes the printed "Peace in Our Time" more interesting than its surface and somewhat dated drama is a Coward foreword on the economic plight of the American stage. Commenting on the necessity of casting his peculiarly British play with British actors and giving them adequate rehearsals, he writes:

"The action is in one set only, the barroom of an ordinary public house (saloon) in London. But the swiftness and smooth running of the play depend upon the meticulous handling of props and furniture by the actors.

"In the English production we rehearsed from the first in the actual set. The bar and the stools, the glasses, bottles, cigarettes, ash trays, etc., were all in place so that the actors, by the time we reached our opening night knew exactly how to coordinate their dialogue with their props and business. The result was an unflurried and expert performance.

"In the American theater this kind of production would be out of the question. It is against union rules to engage a skeleton staff, or even heads of departments, for rehearsals. None of the actual furniture or properties can be used without the employment of a full staff, and the cost of this would naturally be so crippling to a production that no management could be expected to pay it.

Trade Viewpoint Crippling

"This frustrating situation which has arisen from over-preoccupation with the theater as a trade and not enough preoccupation with it as an art will, I imagine, ultimately reduce the living drama to a status of third or fourth importance in the sphere of entertainment.

"This thought is, of course, intolerable to those of us who belong to the theoter and love it deeply and truely, for the living drama is fundamentally an art, an international art, and it should not be allowed, in spite of modern trends and political upheavals, to degenerate into competitive national trade unionism."

In those last two paragraphs, the angry Coward tackles one of the thorniest patches of today's theater. He is undoubtedly justified. I have seen any number of plays in the rehearsal or tryout stages at E Street's Un-natural National working in hotel rooms simply because to walk on the stage and use a set already in place would cost the management several hundred dollars (if a crew "works" for only a few minutes, it is paid on a basis of hours).

In recent years, too, the press has been filled with hagglings over the custom of calling any "drama" a "musical" which uses offstage music. This can mean hundreds of dollars' difference in the weekly payroll.

But I wonder if Mr. Coward stopped to think of the millions he has made from the theater and of the millions many other artists have gained at times when the producers allowed the then-unionless stage hands and musicians only the barest wages. I wonder if, in his anger against the unions which make producing so problematical, Mr. Coward realizes that London's chorus girls are now asking $32 a week instead of the $26 established minimum.

Granted, Destiny's Tot alludes to this argument in pointing out that the theater is an art, not a trade, but it is surprising, I find that one who's endured so many slings and arrows hasn't the perspective to see exactly why the theatrical union impasse exists. The pendulum was bound to swing, much as one may share his anger.

IN BRIEF: Frances Starr, of Kalorama rd., returned last night to the Broadway stage in "The Young and Fair"; notes on the new play's reception at the Fulton tomorrow morning . . . Alexandria's Little Theater last night opened a run of "The Male Animal," the Thurber-Nugent comedy, with Fred Walton, jr., in the role created by Writer-Director Nugent; the comedy will be repeated tonight and tomorrow night at the Cameron st. recreation center . . . The Barter Theater's "Papa Is All," acted last night at the Washington-Lee High School, Arlington, will be repeated Thursday night at the Arlington Farms Auditorium; tickets at Lubars', 1300 G st.and Mrs. Stabler's, 1616 K st. . . . The Pix has another four-hour show: "13 Rue Madeleine" and Stanley and Livingston," opening today.

THE ARTY PRUDENCE: Ethel Mary Casey, noted for her roles with the Cross Roads and Alexandria Little theaters, has the lead in Walter Kerr's comedy of college dramatics, "Stardust," which the Mount Vernon Players are acting in their Undercroft Auditorium at 9th st. and Mass. ave., these nights. Helen Brewer has directed the Catholic U. dramatist's play, which will run through Saturday, December 4

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Will Circulation Still Climb After Corson's Joke Is Published?

Dear Mr. Circulation Director: Several District Liners have come to my rescue, and authorized me to have this newspaper delivered to them, in exchange for that joke you offered to barter.

Almost to a man (or woman) they concluded their conversation with me by saying sternly: "Now this joke of Corson's had better be good, or I'll feel cheated."

Not so with Eleanor Smith, formerly of 341 Willard ave., Chevy Chase, Md. Eleanor confided that she and Joseph E. Norton had been going to work together, and reading the comic pages together; so they finally decided to get married last Sunday (many happy returns) and set up housekeeping. They were going to subscribe anyhow.

You can deliver their paper, daily and Sunday, to 1230 Crittenden st. nw.

Another daily and Sunday client almost floored me when she gave me her name—Dean Gold of 1601 Argonne pl. nw., Apartment 425. No relation, but see that she gets good service.

And don't mix up these five orders: Mrs. D. C. Rosinski of 1841 Columbia rd., apartment 714, already gets the Sunday paper. She wants you to add the daily. The same goes for Ester Davidson of 208 Raymond st., Chevy Chase, Md., and Earl J. Lombard of 5301 38th ave., Hyattsville, Md.

But James J. Arthur of 116 12th st. ne., apartment 4; and Lieut. C. L. Johnson of 2716 31st st. se., apartment A-664, forgot to tell me whether they want daily and Sunday or just daily—so please have the carrier boy ask.

Former Washington Post tube route man W. Bush, jr., of Brandywine, Md., wants both the daily and Sunday papers, but don't start them until December 1.

And please check to see whether Commander C. C. Angel, U. S. Naval Ammunition Depot, Shumaker, Ark., is getting his mail edition, daily and Sunday.

Then you'd better make good on that joke you offered in payment—and if it's funny enough, I may even subscribe myself. Why not? I buy the paper every day anyhow, to read Leonard Lyons.

MISCELLANY

The telephone number of the 1949 Inaugural Committee will not be Sterling 1949, as erroneously reported elsewhere. The correct number is Sterling 1555 . . . Mrs. Alexander Irving of 4514 Connecticut ave. nw. wonders if I can use my "influence" with Capital Transit to get them to make bus windows easier to open and close. She says, "You know, some of us never got around to taking the Charles Atlas graduate course" . . . 11-year-old Beverly Bosworth of 23 W st. nw., says that the reason Dewey lost was that he stayed at the Roosevelt Hotel . . . And Mrs. Calvin B. Trotter of 1141 12th st. nw., observes that loser Dewey took a post-election trip to Tucson (Ariz.) where he stayed at a resort hotel named "El Conquistador" . . . In plain English, that means "The Conqueror," and Mrs. Trotter wonders whether the reservations were made before or after November 2 . . . Now I know how to "do something about the weather" . . . All I had to do was react to a day-long drizzle by asking "what happened to the sun?" and bingo!—out came the sun to provide us with two beautiful fall days.

HI HO, SILVERWARE!

I can't keep this bottled up any longer. I've got to tell somebody.

For years I've been fighting against wiping the dishes. Not because I'm lazy, but because I don't like arguments. They always go something like this:

She: Don't try to wipe each piece of silverware separately, dear. You're supposed to pick up a whole batch of it and . . .

Me: Look, honey, let me wipe the silverware my way. Just go ahead with your washing.

She: But Bill, it'll take you forever to finish it that way. Don't be so stubborn. Pick up a handful and . . .

Me: I can't wipe it properly when I have a handful. I don't think anybody can wipe it properly. You've got to take one piece at a time and . . .

She: You're just making extra work for yourself.

Me: All right, so who's doing the work? I am, and if I'm going to do it, I want to do it right. You're not going to make a sloppy housewife out of me.

She: Are you insinuating that I'm a sloppy housewife. Let me tell you a thing or two young fellow . . .

See what I mean? For years now we've been going round and round over the proper method of wiping silverware.

Does anybody else have the same problem, or do these things just happen to me?

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

There have been a good many derogatory remarks about policemen in connection with the Kilmer case, and I think they call for an answer.

I notice that in the Kilmer case, and the "sandbagging" case, and many others, it is the new and inexperienced policeman who causes the trouble.

When I think of how careful my husband is with his gun, I think, "My, what a poor lot of prospects the Police Department has to choose from these days, in their efforts to fill their ranks!"

When my husband took the police exams in 1934, jobs were few and far between, and he had to compete with a number of college graduates. In those days, a policeman's pay was far better than that of a Government worker with comparable qualifications and abilities.

But the situation is far different today. If you were a college (or even high school) graduate, would you accept a job on the force, with its many disadvantages?

Would you be willing to work a six-day week, with different hours every week? Would you accept the dangers, the hardships, and the inequalities of pay?

Let's put the blame where it rightly belongs; not on the Commissioners or police officials, but on Congress, and on the changing times for which Congress has failed to make adequate provision.

Name Withheld,
Alexandria, Va.

Dear Madam:

The things you say are quite true, and are always borne in mind by thoughtful, constructive critics of the Police Department.

So long as Washington is governed as a conquered province, and its people have no civic voice, we'll have to accept whatever Congress chooses to hand us, and make the best of it. Bill.

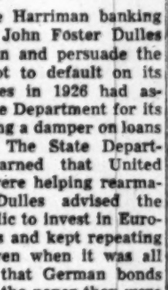
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

The Struggle For the Ruhr

By Drew Pearson

On March 7, 1936, Hitler's small, newly organized army marched into the vital Ruhr, publicly thumbing its nose at the giant but motionless French army.



Pearson

All that day the French cabinet met, debated, hesitated, finally did nothing. One reason they did nothing was their ally across the English Channel. London refused to back France up.

This failure to act, with its loss of the Ruhr, was the crucial turning point leading up to World War II. After March 7, 1936, it was only a matter of time.

For after that Hitler had the giant coke, coal, iron, steel and chemical industries of the Ruhr. After that he could leap ahead in the armament race. With the Ruhr in his hands no other European country could catch up with him.

That is why France today is more aroused than at any time since she was overrun by German troops, why Charles de Gaulle has threatened to kick out the Marshall Plan, why President Auriol of France has pleaded with the United States, why French Communists have jeered at the United States as the German-loving enemy of France.

For handing the Ruhr back to the German cartels means just one thing to the French—the turning point toward another war. For whoever controls the Ruhr controls Europe.

During the years between the end of World War I and 1933, when Hitler came to power, the banking firm of Brown Brothers, Harriman dumped around one billion dollars of American investors' money into Germany, much of it to the Ruhr. Simultaneously, the banking firm of Dillon, Read dumped several hundred millions—much of it also into the Ruhr.

In 1933, the Harriman banking firm retained John Foster Dulles to go to Berlin and persuade the Reischbank not to default on its interest. Dulles in 1926 had assailed the State Department for its policy of putting a damper on loans to Germany. The State Department had warned that United States loans were helping rearmament. But Dulles advised the American public to invest in European securities and kept repeating this advice even when it was all too apparent that German bonds weren't worth the paper they were printed on.

Today Mr. Dulles is head of the American delegation to the United Nations and a top adviser to the Truman Administration.

Today, the former head of Dillon, Read, James V. Forrestal, is Secretary of National Defense, while his old banking partner, William H. Draper, is Undersecretary of the Army.

Today, Averell Harriman of the Harriman banking firm which poured money into Germany, is United States Ambassador under the Marshall Plan, while another Harriman banking partner, Robert Lovett, is Undersecretary of State.

These are the gentlemen who loaned the money to build up the Ruhr between World Wars I and II. These are also the gentlemen who have now decided that the Ruhr shall go back to the big German cartels.

Note—Having been wrong so tragically once, the French figure these banker-statesmen can be wrong again. If they are wrong, it is the French who will have to pay the penalty.

To understand the importance of the Ruhr, you have to understand what would happen if a slice of the United States from Pittsburgh to Cleveland to Wheeling, W. Va., were carved out of our economy. Removal of the great blast furnaces and rolling mills in this area would paralyze the auto industry, the construction industry, farm machinery, machine tools. Almost every industry would come to a halt.

Likewise, Frence, Italy, Belgium, most of Europe are partly dependent on Ruhr coal, coke or steel. The consumers are even more concerned than the producers. To them the Ruhr is vital for two reasons:

1. To make sure it doesn't become another arsenal for war.

2. To make sure its raw materials continue to build up a peaceful Europe.

To that end, it is being proposed by some Washington advisers that Ruhr factories be managed not by the German cartels, but by neutral cooperatives.

The Swedes, Norwegians, Swiss, Dutch, Belgians are trusted in Europe because they are small and don't want war. If war comes they have most to lose. Their stake in peace is tremendous.

If a cooperative to operate the Ruhr was formed and these smaller, neutral countries given a dominant part in the management, French fears would cease. Furthermore, the Germans could not object. French, British, American and even German representatives could sit in on the management, but the small neutrals would hold the balance of power.

The principle of a cooperative is that the consumer is just as important as the producer. If the cooperative makes more money, the consumer gets a dividend. He shares in the management.

Ruhr industry is so important to the consumer nations of Europe that they deserve a voice in its trol will give the best quietus to French fears, the best safeguards for future peace.
